Killer Barrow And Woman Bandit Slain In Police Net

Notorious Outlaw, Cigar Smoking Bonnie Parker, Ambushed.

Louisiana Deputies Aid Texas Rangers

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

Arcadia, La., May 23.—Clyde Barrow, notorious Texas outlaw, and his cigar-smoking gunwoman, Bonnie Parker, were ambushed and shot to death near here today in a sensational encounter with a posse led by an old-time Texas Ranger.

The law-mocking desperado, whizzing along the Jamestown-Sailes road, a little used highway, at 85 miles an hour, ran right into a trap set for him, after having been lured into the State by a relative of a former convict who promised protection.

Barrow's car, running wild, careened from the road and smashed into an embankment. As the wheels spun, the posse continued to fire until the car was almost shot to pieces.

The body of the gunman, who, four years ago was a minor hoodlum scarcely known outside of Dallas, was found slumped behind the steering wheel, a revolver in one hand.

Bonnie Parker died with her head between her knees. She still was clutching the machine gun.

"We killed Barrow and Bonnie Parker at 9:15 this morning," reported Ted Hinton, one of the Texas officers, to the sheriff's office in Dallas. "They were at Black Lake, a hideout we had been watching for weeks."

Never Had a Chance.

Fred Hamer, former captain of the Texas Rangers, who had been waiting in the brush for days for Barrow to come by on his regular run, added:

"They did not get to fire a shot. Their car was full of guns and ammunition, but they did not get a chance to use them."

Barrow had been lured into northwest Louisiana, through arrangement with officers, for what he thought was a rendezvous with an underworld friend near Ringgold.

Girl Smashes Flight Record

Wings From England to Australia in 15 Days in Old Plane.

Port Darwin, Northern Australia, May 23 (AP).—Petite Jean Batten, who refused to quit trying after two failures, today made a new aviation record for women by completing a flight from England to Australia in 14 days 23 hours and 25 minutes.

The 24-year-old New Zealand girl brought her moth plane, which has been in use for nearly five years, down at 3 p. m. local time (1:30 a. m. Eastern standard time), to cut four and a half days off the previous woman's record, set by Amy Johnson, wife of Capt. James A. Mollison.

"I had an adventurous trip," she said upon her arrival. "The weather was frightful throughout—where can I get a cup of tea?"

On the last stage of her trip, across the Timor Sea, headwinds blew her plane miles south of the course, she said, but she managed to battle through and had no difficulty in finally locating Port Darwin.

Miss Batten, who acted as her own mechanic, said her plane functioned perfectly all the way. She plans to leave tomorrow for Brisbane, but will not attempt to fly to her native New Zealand, she said, because her machine does not have sufficient range to cross the Tasman Sea, a distance of 1,200 miles.

Shoemaker Gets '$50 or Ten Days'

Congressman Found Guilty of Disorderly Conduct.

Minneapolis, May 23 (AP).—Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, arrested Monday in connection with the strike disorders here, was convicted of a charge of disorderly conduct today and sentenced by Municipal Judge Wright to pay a $50 fine or serve 10 days in the city workhouse. Sentence was stayed until July 2.

J. K. Scott, a special policeman, testified Shoemaker was arrested after he harangued a crowd in the market place, where striking truck drivers rioted Monday. Cross-examination brought out that Shoemaker made no use of a stick he carried.

1,000 Chinese Slain, Japan Given Blame

Destruction of 20 Towns in Manchukuo Laid to Tokyo Bombs.

Shanghai (Thursday), May 24 (AP). Reports that Japanese military airplanes had destroyed 20 farm villages in southeast Manchukuo, killing 1,000 persons and injuring hundreds of others, reached here today from Peiping.

The reports, not confirmed from other sources, were that Chinese farmers in Manchuria refused to give up their arms on demand of the Japanese army and that the bombing of their homes resulted.

The bombing was said to have occurred yesterday, and many villages were reported still burning today from incendiary bombs.

The efforts of Japanese troops to clear out opposition elements in the Japanese-sponsored Empire of Manchukuo have given rise to reports of numerous clashes with Chinese.

Communication with the territory involved is extremely difficult.

Attention has been called several times by the Soviet Union to allegations that Japanese military planes are active in Manchukuo, and several months ago charges were made that they were flying over the Russian border.

Japanese sources denied that Russian territory had been trespassed upon and stated that only a few planes were in Manchukuo.

Berlin Jaywalkers To Be Fined on Spot

Berlin, May 23 (U.P.).—Jaywalkers will have to carry cash under a new law promulgated in Berlin today.

It authorizes policemen to fine jaywalkers on the spot. Sums to be collected range from 50 pfennigs to 1 mark, or from about 20 to 40 cents.

McAdoo Recovering From Recent Illness

Senator McAdoo of California has almost completely recovered from his recent illness, the Associated Press reported yesterday. The former Secretary has been in the Naval Hospital.

Moley Crime Report Urges More Agents

Roosevelt Told Cummings Needs 1,000 Operators for Huge Dragnet.

A vast Federal dragnet for criminals, reinforced by 1,000 Justice Department investigators, yesterday was asked by Prof. Raymond Moley in the first instalment of his report to the President on the Nation's war against crime.

In vigorous language, the Administration's former No. 1 "brain-truster" urged immediate enactment of measures strengthening the Justice Department's mailed fist.

But Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' crime bills, many of which have become law, are not enough, Moley told his former chief.

He said the department's field investigating force of 397 is "totally inadequate" and should be increased immediately to not less than 1,000.

Present Staff Overworked.

"This strengthening of the department is essential," he reported.

"Unless adequate additions are authorized, the new powers will remain wholly unexercised, and the impressive record already made by the department will be heavily discounted by the hopeless effort to

Slain Commander Found by Roadside

Naval Officer's Killer to Face Kansas Trial.

Kinsley, Kans., May 23 (AP).—The body of Lieut. Comdr. S. J. Trowbridge, U. S. N., slain by a hitchhiker, Leo Hudgins, former Mississippi convict, was found today near State highway No. 1, 12 miles south of Kinsley.

Bel Gossett, Edwards County sheriff, brought the body here to await the arrival from Marietta, Okla., of Hudgins, who confessed beating the naval officer to death and leaving his body in a roadside ditch.

Since the slaying apparently occurred in Edwards County, authorities indicated Hudgins would be prosecuted on murder charges here.

Sweetheart and Doctor Found Guilty of Aiding Dillinger

St. Paul, May 23 (AP).—The law won against two more associates of desperado John Dillinger today, while the outlaw himself roamed free.

A Federal court jury convicted Evelyn Frechette, his sweetheart, and Dr Clayton May, Minneapolis physician, of conspiracy to hide the fugitive, and sentenced each to a prison term of two years and to pay a fine of $1,000.

Mrs. Augusta Salt, in whose apartment Dr. May treated Dillinger after he was wounded in escaping March 31 from an apartment where he lived with Miss Frechette, was acquitted.

Mrs. Beth Green, indicted with the three, this afternoon was sentenced to 15 months in prison. She pleaded guilty several days before the trial started.

The half-Indian and Dr. May were granted a week's stay of execution. Their attorneys announced an appeal would be taken to the cricuit court of appeals.

The jury deliberated seven hours. Dr. May and Mrs. Salt admitted, during the trial, that they had treated the notorious fugitive, but asserted they did so in fear of their lives.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday termed "extremely gratifying" the convictions of Evelyn Frechette and Dr. Clayton May for aiding John Dillinger, according to the Associated Press.

The Attorney General added:

"Our campaign is not only against the criminal himself but also against those who intentionally cooperate with him, and their punishment is essential to success in the adequate enforcement of law."

Gang Slays Assailant of D. C. Girl

Kauffman's Slug-Riddled Body Is Discovered in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Fontaine in Hiding Here as Racketeer Is "Put on Spot."

Huddled behind a boulder in a fashionable Pittsburgh suburb, one bullet-drilled hand mute evidence of his desperate struggle to stay gangland's vengeance, Morris ("Big George") Kauffman, sought in the wounding of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine in Upper Darby, Pa., a month ago, was found shot to death yesterday.

Kauffman, according to an Associated Press dispatch, was identified through fingerprint records. He had been shot twice through the head and once through his left hand, which evidently he raised to protect himself when former underworld cronies "took him for a ride." His body was found by two men in the Squirrel Hill section.

A gold watch was in his pocket, along with $51 in bills, which led Deputy Coroner W. F. Jackson to discount the theory of robbery. The body had been brought to the lot in an automobile. A trail of blood led from the curb to the boulder.

"Kauffman evidently was 'railroaded' west from Philadelphia, where he has been operating, and 'rubbed out,'" an official investigating the case asserted last night.

Woman Murmured Name.

At Delaware County Hospital, meanwhile, it was recalled that Mrs. Fontaine, whose hereabouts are being kept sacret by Department of Justice agents and Metropolitan police here, murmured the name of "Big George" when she was taken to the operating room with a bullet wound in her back.

"Big Gearge——" gasped Mrs. Fontaine, the sweetheart of William B. Phillips, tattooed gunman, who was slain in a pistol duel with Policeman John A. Caton here April 25, as she struggled for her life.

Kauffman, whose gang, according to police in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, operated a cigarette hijacking ring along the Eastern seaboard, from New York to the South Carolina line, is believed to have been the gunman who shot Mrs. Fontaine in an effort to seal her lips.

When news of Kauffman's death reached police here, they declined to comment. Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, said he was on the lookout for a George Kauffman and that he did not know of a Morris Kauffman.

"We can't discuss the case now."

Another Held In Robles Plot

Fingerprints Compared; Bank Bandit Already Under Arrest.

Tucson, Ariz., May 23 (AP).—A new arrest was made by Tucson police this afternoon in connection with the kidnaping of 6-year-old June Robles.

The fingerprints of the man arrested were taken for comparison with prints found on communications from the child's kidnapers and on articles left in the desert prison pit in which the child spent 19 days.

It was understood he was to be confronted by June, to discover if the little girl could recognize him as one of the three men she has told authorities visited her infrequently while she was buried alive in the desert.

What evidence had led to the pick-up of the man, whose identity was not divulged, was not immediately made known.

Joe Newton, bank and train robber, previously had been arrested for investigation in connection with the kidnaping. Authorities said they had been unable to get any statement from him regarding the abduction.

Priests Reach Border In Mexican Exodus

Nogales, Ariz., May 23 (AP).—Exiled priests from the State of Sonora crossed the Mexican border into the United States today following their vicar general, Mgr. Martin Potera-Robles, who arrived yesterday with nine other Catholic clergymen.

In addition to the priests, who were ordered by Gov. Rudolfo Elias Calles to leave for allegedly violating the Mexican constitutoin, three women have been expelled.

Castle of Austrian Fascist Is Bombed

Vienna, May 23 (AP).—A bomb exploded today in the courtyard of Starhemberg Castle in Waxenburg, Upper Austria, home of Prince Ernest von Starhember, vice chancellor of Austria and leader of the Fascist Heimwehr.

The chapel of the castle was damaged severely and many of the windows of the castle itself were shattered. Authorities said they suspected Nazis of setting off the bomb.

1,500 Men Are Trapped By Strikers

Workers Are Held as Prisoners in Ohio Factory.

Troops Mobilized in Minneapolis Truck Walkout Crisis.

Three thousand automotive strikers in Toledo were holding 1,500 workmen virtual prisoners last night in the Electric Autolite Co. plant. Striking truck drivers in Minneapolis called for disbandment of 2,700 National guardsmen as a condition of resuming peace negotiations.

Toledo, Ohio, May 23 (AP).—Three thousand angry strike pickets and sympathizers held 1,500 day shift workmen at the Electric Autolite Co. plant here virtual prisoners this evening as riots which started in the afternoon continued. Four persons, two of them policemen, were in hospitals.

Brig. Gen. L. S. Conelly of the Ohio National Guard today recommended to Adjt. Gen. Frank D. Henderson that troops be sent into Toledo, but Gov. White said he would not order out the troops unless Sheriff David Krieger requested them.

Sheriff Krieger said he was not sure he could protect the beleaguered workmen, but he did not ask for the militia.

General Strike Threatened.

Meanwhile, State and Federal conciliators were working frantically to bring about a truce in the strike of 1,900 automotive workers, which has been under way here for five weeks.

The situation was complicated by a threat of a general strike in sympathy with the automotive workers. A third of the local unions in Toledo were reported to have voted in favor of the general strike.

Today's rioting began shortly after 100 policemen arrived at the plant to protect day shift workers leaving the building. A strike picket, Miss Alma Hann, of Millbury, Ohio, had just been taken to a hospital with scalp wounds received when she was struck with a bolt which strikers claimed was thrown from the factory.

Tear Bombs Hurled.

The crowd had been assembling in territory adjacent to the factory since noon. Piles of bricks and stones were noticed at strategic places, and a wagon load of bricks was trundled to a point near the factory to provide further ammunition.

Suddenly a barrage of tear gas bombs was hurled from upper factory windows. At the same time, company employes armed with iron bars and clubs dragged a fire hose into the street and played water on the crowd.

The strike sympathizers replied with bricks as they gasped and choked from the gas fumes and fell back.

Police swung their clubs freely, and hand-to-hand fighting followed as they and company employes, armed with iron bars, tried to clear a path for the besieged men and women within the plant.

Shooting Starts.

Two rifle bullets had been fired into the back of the plant before the riot started, and soon pistol shots also were heard. One pistol bullet crashed through a window of the office of C. O. Miniger, president of the company and widely known industrialist.

Five guards hurled gas bombs from the roof of a building adjoining the plant. Police Inspector Ray Allen said the gas fumes were so intense in the street that his men were unable to remain long enough to force a passage for the workers.

The supply of gas bombs soon ran low, and a rush order for more was sent to Cleveland, to be delivered by airplane.

Meanwhile, in Common Pleas Court Judge Roy Stuart granted a new injunction restraining picketing at the plant on request of nonunion employes, who protested that they desired to continue working free from the constant threat of violence from strike sympathizers.

Rabies Epidemic Sweeping Estonia

More Than 300 Bitten by Dogs and Cats.

Helsingfors, Finland, May 23 (U.P.). An epidemic of hydrophobia, believed to have originated in Soviet Russia, was reported sweeping southern Estonia tonight.

Already 300 persons have been bitten by mad dogs and cats. They are being rushed to the Pasteur Institute at Dorpat.

The population is horror-stricken. Authorities ordered mad animals shot. So far, 7,000 dogs and cats have been killed in a futile effort to check the disease.

Labor Chiefs Condemn Darrow Board Report As Blow to Recovery

HUGH S. JOHNSON.

(United Press.)

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson took Clarence Darrow for a ride yesterday.

But Darrow came back.

It wasn't that kind of a "ride."

The two famous word duelists met in Johnson's office after a bewildering series of press releases announcing they were going to get together after having called each other most of the names in the dictionary.

Darrow's headquarters said, They are going on a joy ride.

Johnson's office retorted, Oh, no, it's merely an office call—purely social visit.

So—they went on an automobile ride.

Johnson kept the famous criminal attorney waiting for 15 minutes in an anteroom. Darrow drank or-

Condemn Criticism of NRA, Ask Board Be Abolished.

Attack on Johnson Is Resumed by Nye

Wagner Says Findings Should Prove Aid to Program.

By Raymond Clapper.

NRA staged its counterattack in the Darrow board controversy yesterday, interrupted only by a brief cocktail-hour armistice while the two colorful principals, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Clarence Darrow, went for an automobile ride together.

NRA's labor advisory board, including President William Green of the A. F. of L., John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and other headliners of the labor world, unanimously voted condemnation of the Darrow board and urged the President to terminate its "unhappy existence" at once.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, who introduced the National recovery act in Congress just about a year ago, in a Senate speech said some criticisms of NRA were well founded, but insisted that the Recovery Administration should be allowed to profit by them and not be abolished in view of the great good it had done.

Confer With Roosevelt.

Leon Henderson, chief of the division of research and planning of NRA, came to his chief's defense in a statement denying Gen. Johnson had ignored his recommendations and sought to abolish his division, as charged by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota.

Gen. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, NRA counsel, conferred with President Roosevelt regarding revision of the steel code and new plans for handling the troublesome service codes and small industries. No decisions were reached, Johnson said.

President Roosevelt refused to mix into the Darrow controversy, declaring—in a Latin phrase, res ipsa loquitor—that the Darrow report spoke for itself. He said his

House Adopts Presidential Gun Embargo

Resolution to Empower Halt in Munitions to Chaco Conflict.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With the House unanimously approving the resolution empowering the President to embargo arms shipments to Bolivia and Paraguay, it appeared yesterday Mr. Roosevelt will be in a position before the week ends to cooperate with other nations in seeking to end the Gran Chaco slaughter.

As the House was acting, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously approved the same resolution. Chairman Key Pittman of that group wanted to get Senate action later in the day but debate on the tariff bill and NRA deprived him of moving in this direction.

Pittman is expected to ask unanimous consent for approval of the resolution when he reports it to the Senate today—and this consent is expected to be granted since the usual opponents of such legislation are on the Foreign Relations Committee and they agreed to it.

Cuba Starts Buying Gold, Bans Exports

Havana, May 23 (AP).—A gold-buying program for Cuba was inaugurated today with the signing of a decree by the cabinet setting the price at approximately $35 an ounce.

U. S. Silver Policy Blasts British, Belief

(Copyright, 1934, Associated Press.)

London, May 23 (AP).—British financial leaders were pictured in well-informed quarters today as being highly alarmed by the prospect that President Roosevelt's silver montization program will blast their hopes for the return of Great Britain to the gold standard in the near future.

Despite the nonchalant attitude they assumed toward the American President's message, financial circles were pictured as being thrown into gloom.

"Financial leaders here have been hoping for some time that President Roosevelt would head off the silverites, so there would be no further steps in the direction of world-wide bimetallism," said a well-informed observer.

"Roosevelt's capitulation to the silverites will only give new impetus to the two-base currency movement, which the British distinctly do not want. If bimetallism becomes popular, it may be 'good-by forever' to the gold standard.

"At least it tends to forestall the hopes and plans of Great Britain for return to the gold basis at any time in the near future."

The informant declared that Britain has little interest in silver sales, since India is far less a factor in the white metal market than five years ago and China is far more important.

In government quarters the alarm of the financial leaders was not shared, because British treasury officials do not expect to return to the gold standard soon.

Britain's "Wall street" and the treasury have held divergent views on return to gold for some time. The official view toward gold is that return should be made only when conditions assure it will be permanent.

Doctors Reach Ill Bridegroom After 1,000-Mile Dash to Islands

Los Angeles, May 23 (AP).—Roaring across the Equator, two Navy planes from Coco Solo, Canal Zone, late today completed a 1,000-mile flight to Tagus Cove of the Galapagos Islands with medical aid for William Albert Robinson, Cambridge, Mass., textile manufacturer and explorer, stricken with appendicitis.

Safe landing of the planes at 3:45 p. m. (Pacific standard time) was reported by the Mackay Radio Corporation here in a message relayed from the lonely equatorial archipelago by a fishing trawler that for two days has been standing by the 32-foot, round-the-world ketch, on which the explorer is confined.

Naval surgeons were prepared for an immediate operation.

Since Sunday night Florence Crane Robinson, Chicago heiress bride, has maintained vigil by the bunk of her distressed bridegroom in the tragic interruption of a honeymoon that started last June, when the little craft sailed from New York.

The quick flight, accomplished with the aid of two destroyers which set out from Coco Solo ahead of the planes, was the response of the American Navy to the frantic appeal of Mrs. Robinson.

Action followed the relaying of the appeal to Washington yesterday, and the planes set out at 6:40 a. m., Eastern standard time, today, arriving 12 hours and 5 minutes later. The unusual operations were in charge of Commander R. P. Molten in charge of the Coco Solo Naval Air Base.

The Navy aircraft carried medical supplies and two physicians, Lieut. Comdr. Rollo W. Hutchinson and Lieut. Oscar D. Yarborough, and were in command of Lieut. Comdr. Herman H. Halland.

Officer Robbed In Bandit Chase

Bailiff at Bladensburg Is Kidnaped by Pair He Sought.

Armed parties from the Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad yesterday were scouring nearby Maryland for two colored men who kidnaped and robbed Town Bailiff Lawrence Dayton earlier in the day.

Dayton, supposedly kidnaped by bandits for whom he was searching in connection with the holdup of a Washington gas station, was left stranded on a lonely road near Huntsville, Md., about 2 a. m.

Isaac Lambert, 68, owner of a filling station at Kenilworth and Dean avenues, was robbed and severely beaten by two men about midnight. At Gallinger Hospital his condition was pronounced serious.

A lookout was broadcast by Washington police. Dayton started cruising out River road. Near the town limits he encountered a stalled car and stopped to inquire if the occupants had seen any one resembling the fugitives.

A colored man leveled a gun at him, took the officer's pistol and climbed onto the front seat with him. A second colored man followed. Dayton was ordered to drive to Seat Pleasant, Md. The bandits' car, which police said was stolen, was abandoned.

At Seat Pleasant Dayton was robbed of his badge, watch and $8. The bandits then ordered him to drive out Sheriff road. Arriving at one of the most deserted sections of Prince Georges County, the gunmen ordered Dayton out. Dayton walked to the nearest farmhouse and telephone for help.

Dakota Governor Pleads Not Guilty

Langer, 7 Others Arraigned on 'Shakedown' Charge.

Bismarck, N. Dak., May 23 (AP).—Pleas of not guilty to a charge of conspiracy to obstruct operation of an act of Congress were entered in Federal court today by Gov. William Langer and seven of eight co-defendants.

Judge Miller previously denied a defense motion challenging the petit jury and motions to quash the indictments.

The court has not ruled on the demurrers to the indictment charging conspiracy to solicit political contributions from Federal workers for support of the Leader, Langer administration newspaper.

Troops Held Ready in Truck Strike Crisis

Warring Minnesota Labor Men Give Ultimatum to Governor.

Minneapolis, May 23 (AP).—Demands for demobilization of the National Guard before they would consider acceptance of an extension of the temporary truce were presented to Fov. Floyd B. Olson tonight by a delegation of striking truck drivers.

Authorities have advocated an extension of the armistice declared yesterday after a day of rioting in which one man was killed and two score injured at the City Market place as a climax to the strikers' demands for recognition of their union and wage-hour adjustments.

Gov. Olson, meeting at the Capitol in St. Paul with the delegation, was understood to have informed the group that the guard had not been called out and that martial law had not been declared in Minneapolis.

Guard Mobilizing.

Three regiments of the guard, ordered out by Adjt. Gen. E. A. Walsh upon word from the Governor, were assembling at vantage points. The troops, armed, will not be allowed on the streets and will not appear at the parade grounds, where strikers arranged to hold a big mass meeting tonight.

The guard, officers said, would be held ready to cope with any emergency.

As darkness began to fall the parade ground was dotted with persons, the crowd swelling in numbers with each passing hour.

Hennepin avenue, one of the principal traffic arteries in the city, was choked with automobiles near the parade ground as thousands of persons made for the large unfenced athletic field, several blocks in area.

The call to arms was broadcast to National Guardsmen as city and county authorities received reports the strikers would reject the regional labor board's decision on their wage demands.

Truce Time Is Up.

Minneapolis officials disclosed many lawless persons were drifting into the city as a result of the drivers' walkout.

Held ready for any fresh outbreak in the strike that in the last week has paralyzed truck transportation in the city and cost thousands of dollars, the adjutant general ordered the 135th and 206th Infantries, and the 151st Field Artillery armed for action.

The call was issued at 4:30 p. m., barely two hours before the temporary truce, declared at the height of yesterday's bloody disorder in the market place, was scheduled to end.

The mobilized guard consists of 3,700 men, many of whom are expected to be dispatched to the Parade Grounds for the mass meeting of all unions in the city at 7 p. m.

Strike headquarters revealed that their leaders had postponed two hours, until 5 p. m., the meeting of officials to vote on acceptance of the Labor Board's decision.

Rejection Feared.

Other troops were stationed at nearby towns and, Gen. Walsh said, would not be moved in unless necessary.

During a day of quiet no commercial trucks, except those previously agreed upon, moved on the city streets. Both factions were pondering the decision handed down by the regional board.

The employers had indicated they would sign, and a reported sentiment for acceptance on the part of the strikers later was interpreted as disagreement among strike leaders, and probable rejection.

The plan embraced written agreements between employes and employers after collective bargaining or arbitration, and forbade discrimination against employes who are union members. The plan also set up a collective bargaining system, fixed wages and hours of work, established seniority rights and outlined a procedure for arbitration of future differences.

Recognition of the union by the employers was not included, and, although the strikers had receded from this demand during negotiations, reports were this was the basis for arguments of those strikers demanding rejection of the board's decision.

Salt Lake Is So Dry That Sheep Swim It

Ogden, Utah, May 23 (AP).—Great Salt Lake has shrunk to the point, owing to prolonged drought, where bands of sheep can navigate it from their island pastures under their own power.

Bill to Pension Widow, Who Remarried, Vetoed

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed a bill which provided for the payment of $105.07 as pension to Mrs. Lottie Bryant Steel, covering the period from the death of Col. Montgomery Bryant to the date of her remarriage in 1903.

"Should the beneficiary of this bill again become a widow, she will have a pensionable status under the law of May 1, 1920," the President's message said. "I fail to see any justification for the proposal to now place her in a pensionable status for a period during which the law then in force precluded the allowance of pension."

Roosevelt's Big Water Project Nearly Ready

Plans for Vast Program Going to Congress This Session.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

An outline of one of President Roosevelt's visions for the future—the planned development of the Nation's watersheds on such a tremendous scale as would dwarf all former rivers and harbors work—will be transmitted to Congress before adjournment.

This became known at the White House yesterday with the inference that this subject, embracing as it does a wide field for social betterment, will be the only message concerned with "social legislation" the President would transmit at this session.

In itself, the message will not call for legislation at this session, the President said, but it is expected to give the Administration's policy on the whole question of water use—involving flood control, soil erosion, reforestation, retirement of submarginal land, and power development.

With the message will go reports by a special Cabinet committee, composed of Secretaries Wallace, Ickes, Dern and Roper. The President appointed this group earlier in the year to go over the program with the view to arriving at a long-range plan.

Aim to Avoid "Pork" Taint.

The Cabinet officers have suggested that a new method should be adopted by the Government in handling waterways to remove the taint of "pork" from rivers and harbors projects.

As outlined several months ago, President Roosevelt feels that such Federal projects should be determined by three chief considerations—the elimination of danger, economic need and social value. That politics too often has replaced judgment in the allotment of projects, heretofore, is generally conceded.

Under this plan, a certain amount would be set aside by Congress each year for public improvements, which would be determined in accordance with needs by some new agency. Roughly, the President believes the country could be divided into watersheds—the area that drains into rivers—for this purpose, although this need not be followed.

Congress Asked Plan.

Congress cleared the way for such a proposal in February when a concurrent resolution was adopted calling on the President to submit a comprehensive program. Legislation on rivers and harbors also has been held up as though to give the President an opportunity to state his policy.

Although most of the Cabinet committee's survey is understood to deal in general terms, outlining broad recommendations for the future, some specific projects are taken up. They are expected to select certain rivers as most likely for hydroelectric power development.

Behind Mr. Roosevelt's statement that no legislation is contemplated at this session was believed to lie a desire for further study, which he possibly will ask Congress to undertake between sessions. One of the most involved questions is that of better land utilization, which the Administration has been nibbling at in several directions.

Marking of Channel Started at Crisfield

Crisfield, Md., May 23 (Spl.). The work of marking the Wicomico River Channel with beacons and buoys has been started by the United States Lighthouse Service.

The marking was started last week at the mouth of the river, where a blinker has been installed. The crew will proceed up the river as far as Mount Vernon. It is understood request has been made for markings up to the Salisbury Harbor.

Walker Recall In Fall Planned By Roosevelt

Chief Likely to Release Emergency Director for Summer.

President Roosevelt yesterday said he would have to release Frank C. Walker, executive director of the National Emergency Council, from his duties for the summer, but that he will call him back to Washington next fall.

As stated in yesterday's Post, Mr. Walker has been importuning the President to relieve him from his various Government assignments so that he might return to New York and attend to his private affairs.

This has been going on for six months, the President said, adding that he felt he would have to give one of his chief assistants the summer months off, but that the Administration would need him again when things pick up later in the year.

Mr. Walker, who also is executive secretary of the President's Executive Council, intends to return to his law practice in New York after Congress adjourns. Since the President himself will be gone much of the summer, it was thought his duties would permit a several months' absence.

Seven Postmasters Named for Virginia

Seven Virginia appointments were included in a lengthy list of postmaster nominations transmitted yesterday to the Senate by President Roosevelt. They were:

Five thousand pounds of smoked pork was received by the local office today to be distributed among the 400 families, immediately, who are on the relief list of the local office.

Crisfield Disappointed At Strawberry Prices

Crisfield, Md., May 23 (Spl.).—Strawberry growers in this section were disappointed at prices received at auction sales at Marion Station yesterday. Best grades brought only as high as $3.25 per 32-quart crate, and as low as $2. The growers assert that if the market does not advance the strawberry season will be a financial failure again.

As yet no city buyers have arrived. Growers predict very short season, however.

Not Guilty!

Baltimore Mayor Not Any Lawbreaker.

Baltimore, May 23 (Spl.).—Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore is not an outlaw. That fact was developed today when someone asked the mayor point-blank if he was engaged in breaking the law.

"Of course not," declared the surprised official. "What do you mean?"

Then the friend pointed out that the auto tags assigned to the mayor were attached to a car, obviously not the mayor's regular machine, parked in front of the city hall. It is against the law to attach tags to a car other than the one for which the plates are issued.

Mr. Jackson explained that he is having his auto repaired, and is using another car for his official trips. And he's not a lawbreaker—because he has a special five-day license from the auto vehicle commissioner to transfer his tags.

Silver Money Issue Optional With Treasury

Billion and Half, or None, Would Be Permitted New Measure.

The Administration's proposed silver purchase program, while not inflationary, would permit the Government to issue as much as a billion and a half dollars in new money, or none at all, the Treasury Department said yesterday.

Under the silver bill, introduced in the Senate and House, the Government would issue silver certificates at the face value of the silver purchased. The price paid for the metal, as well as the amount bought, would determine the amount of currency issued, the Treasury explained.

The bill provides that the Treasury shall purchase silver until the metal reaches 25 per cent strength in metallic reserves of the currency or until the price of silver reaches $1.29 an ounce.

Profit Is Possible.

As 1,300,000,000 ounces might be purchased, a price of 50 cents an ounce would call for $650,000,000 of new money, while if purchases were as high as $1.29 an ounce, more than a billion and a half in new money could be printed.

Since the bill is largely permissive as to silver purchases, it also is possible that little or no silver would be bought, which would call for little new silver money.

A potential $900,000,000 profit also might be realized by the Government should the full 1,300,000,000 ounces be purchased at less than 50 cents an ounce.

A million ounces of silver purchased at say, 50 cents per ounce, would cost $500,000. The Government would issue against this $500,000 in new money. But as only 371¼ grains of pure silver per dollar would be held in back of this new money, the Government would have left over approximately 300,000 ounces of silver as a "profit." This silver would not be written on the Treasury books at any fixed price and would be carried as an asset along with other Government property such as desks, buildings or other holdings. No value would be placed on this silver on the Treasury's books.

Average Man Unaffected.

Meantime the Administration silver program is not expected to affect the average man's pocketbook, his silverware or his economic status.

The silver program now before Congress does, however, vest important new monetary powers in President Roosevelt which could lead to further action toward world business recovery.

Behind the scenes the measure involves important changes in the metallic backing of the American dollar. The country's silver money reserves, now little more than one-tenth of the huge $7,757,000,000 gold reserves, will be increased gradually until they amount to 25 per cent of the metallic monetary reserves.

This would mean secret purchase through the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund of enough silver or 1,310,000,000 ounces on the present basis to bring the reserves to the desired percentage.

Ultimate effects of this program on the business situation and the recovery program were in doubt yesterday. Even Wall Street speculators were unwilling to bank on its possibilities.

Treasury officials doubted that new silver dollars would go into circulation. Under the new silver bill the Treasury is to issue silver certificates at its discretion against all silver bought. These probably would flow back into the banks without remaining in active circulation.

Monetary System Unchanged.

Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel, who aided in the drafting of the new silver legislation, said the program makes no change in the monetary system of the United States, described by Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau as a "1934 model gold standard." In no sense, he said, is it a bimetallic or symetallic monetary standard.

In the final analysis the bill merely provides for an increased silver reserve behind the Nation's currency.

The long-range possibilities of the legislation, however, are regarded as important. President Roosevelt in urging the legislation suggested a broadening of the metallic basis of the currency presumably as a step to arrive at a yet undefined currency system which would involve the stabilization of "the purchasing and debt paying power of our money on a more equitable level."

The new program gives the United States still another bargaining point when the time comes for leading nations of the world to negotiate an international monetary agreement.

Such an agreement, according to economists, would go far toward solving economic problems of the world. With the largest stock of gold in the world and an ambitious silver buying program, it is believed the United States could largely dictate the basis for an international monetary stabilization plan.

R. W. Dutton's Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Private funeral services for Robert William Dutton, 77, former District fire chief, who died Tuesday at his home, 1721 Kilbourne place, will be held tomorrow.

Appointed fire chief in 1901, while a reporter on the Evening Star, Mr. Dutton directed the executive end of operations and delegated actual duties of combat to deputy chiefs. He retired within three years when Congress required the chief officer of the Fire Department to be an actual firefighter with a record of service. He was appointed immediately deputy recorder of deeds, a post he continued to hold until two years ago.

A native of Washington, as were his parents and grandparents, he was educated in local public schools and received a law degree from Columbian College, now George Washington University, though he never practiced before the bar.

Reorganization of the Firemen's Relief Organization was one of his first works as fire chief.

Mr. Dutton is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marguerite L. Dutton; two sons, Capt. D. L. Dutton, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Totten, Long Island, and H. H. Dutton, of Washington, and a sister, Miss Susan A. Dutton, also of this city. Two grandchildren, the children of Capt. Dutton, also survive.

Labor Leaders Term Report Of Darrow Blow to Recovery

latest information from Darrow was that the board would finish its work by the end of the month.

Senator Nye renewed his attack on NRA and Gen. Johnson, declaring a complete shake-up was imperative and urging that Congress refuse to go home until it was accomplished.

Richberg, in a radio speech, suggested a little more humility "to political critics who assume to solve these problems after a few days of second-hand investigation."

The Darrow board, in its hearing of complaints from the garment industries, broke into a bitter internal row and recessed while members calmed down in private.

In view of Darrow's long record as a champion of labor, the sharp denunciation of his work by the NRA labor advisory board came as a surprise. The labor leaders were even more denunciatory of the Board than General Johnson and Donald Richberg have been.

In the resolutions, the labor leaders represented on the advisory board said it was especially unfortunate that the Darrow Board had reached its conclusions without consulting representatives of labor, and without thought of the consequences to millions of workers in coded industries.

Informers Criticized.

"Obviously," the resolutions continued, "the Darrow Board has secured its information regarding specific codes from the rag-tag and bobtail elements of industry. Irresponsible malcontents, sweatshop employers and business interests which had lost special privileges found the latchstring out and a warm welcome awaiting them before the National Review oBard.

"Representatives of the organized workers were not invited to the Darrow feast and approved codes of fair competition were savagely attacked without any member of the Darrow Board stopping to inquire from any autoritative source the effect of such attacks upon the economic well being of the Nation's wage earners."

The resolutions said that the board sought to glorify the small businessman and the consumer both whereas their interests were in conflict, one wanting high prices and the other low prices.

"The Darrow board should decide which of these groups it elects to serve," the resolution continued. "Certainly it can not ride horses going in opposite directions.

Urge End of Board.

"The Darrow board has rendered a dis-service to the Nation and its citizens in a time of great economic stress. It has pandered to the worst elements in our political and economic life. If its members are not conscious of these facts, they are victims of arch stupidity and have forfeited their right to continue to function as a Government agency."

The resolution added "unhesitatingly" that the board should have its "unhappy existence promptly terminated by Executive order of the President."

As the man who sponsored the recovery act, Senator Wagner sought to step in between the belligerents to halt the brawl-like exchange of sarcastic personalities and to lift the discussion back to the plane of calm reason.

"The New Deal," he said in a Senate speech answering criticisms of NRA, "has accomplished too much to fear destruction by its enemies. It can only suffer if its friends clothe it in perfection and scorn the advocates of improvement.

Says Program Is Sound.

"I do not mean to deny that some prices are too high today. Nor do I deny that there are some industries which are engaged in price fixing to the detriment of the public welfare. But despite this, the general tendency is favorable, the underlying method of approach of the recovery program is sound and the need today is to make that program even more effective and to prevent its instrumentalities of control from falling into the hands of selfish groups.

"It is true, and many able Senators and Mr. Darrow's board have rendered a great service by bringing it to light, that the small man still suffers from many of the monopolistic tyrannies that have persisted for half a century.

"How may these evils be remedied? Certainly not by repealing the sections of the recovery act which modify the antitrust laws, for all of these evils existed when those laws were in full force. It is not the code idea that promotes monopoly."

Senator Wagner said that sections of the Darrow report recognizing that there could be no return to unregulated competition might have been plucked from the plea he made for enactment of the recovery act a year ago.

Praises Johnson.

"The immediate problem before us," the Senator added, "is to prevent the production control devices of the New Deal from being turned into an old deal instrument for the profit of the few and the denial of the many. It is at this crucial stage that forceful and careful and patriotic criticism such as has been forthcoming during the past few months is necessary.

"Gen. Johnson and the men under him have faced a superhuman task with superhuman efforts, with vision, fairness and courage. They deserve the highest tribute.

"The able critics of the recovery program have said that it is fatally defective, because it is advised by the very leaders who brought about disaster in 1929. I do not believe that our troubles were brought on solely by improper leadership; many of them were caused by an outworn economic system. The same men, when given an opportunity to cooperate and to receive the advice of Government, may achieve far better results. Nevertheless, there is a good deal of force in this thoughtful criticism."

Cites Business Gains.

Senator Wagner said the employment index is 37 per cent higher than a year ago. Hours of labor have been reduced 16 per cent. The factory pay roll index has gained 73 per cent in a year and is the highest in three years, he said. Basic industrial output, by the index, is up 34 per cent above a year ago.

"The back of the depression is broken," he said, adding that some who see their own scalps saved want to return to the old regime.

House Votes Embargo Powe For President

Resolution Would Permit Halt in Armament for Chaco Conflict.

Swanson, at a press conference threw out the warning to Japan that if the Tokyo government insists on demanding naval parity next year, the United States would be forced to consider extending and strengthening its naval bases on the Pacific Ocean. He said the Navy can see no reason for any change in the ratios established at the Washington and London conferences.

The Swanson statement was regarded as the projection of a thought for the Japanese to mull over while formulating plans for increased naval strength. In this connection the United States has left open the future of American naval bases in the Philippines after those islands attain full independence. Our right to enlarge naval bases in the Philippines may prove a good bargaining point in next year's conference.

During the brief debate in the House on the Chaco arms resolution, Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, warned that any effort of the Administration to revive the resolution empowering the President to declare an arms embargo against "an aggressor nation" would be stoutly resisted by the Republicans. Fish is the ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Would Disarm Both.

He said he was "100 per cent" for the pending resolution clothing the President to act against both nations involved in the Chaco warfare and that such action should have been taken a year ago. But he said he feared Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador to the Geneva Arms Conference, might undertake to promise favorable action on the "aggressor nation" embargo measure in order to get action from other powers at the forthcoming meeting.

Citing Japanese activities in Manchuria as an illustration, Fish argued that this country would be at war with Japan within 30 days if, under the proposed resolution, President Roosevelt undertook to name the Nipponese as aggressors in that warfare.

He maintained that if Congress empowered the President to name the aggressor in any conflict which might occur around the world, it would be "entrance, not by the back door, but by the front door, to the League of Nations, to enforce the sanctions of the league." Moreover, he contended, it would mean the delegation of the last vestige of Congressional power, because the President would be able to declare war without consulting Congress.

The result of giving the President power to outlaw arms shipments to "aggressor nations," he continued, would be to leave the United States "holding the bag." He thought the time had come for this country to "refuse to pull chestnuts out of the fire for the rest of the world, time to stop passing moral judgments on the rest of the world, and time we minded our own business."

Favors United States Ownership.

Fish was loudly applauded when he said that despite his opposition to socialistic schemes, he heartily favored Government ownership of munitions. It is possible such a step may be recommended by the Senate's Special Munitions Committee, now preparing to investigate the munitions industry.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, emphasized that the question of declaring an arms embargo against aggressor nations was not involved in the pending resolution. He added that the resolution was designed solely to stop the Chaco warfare.

Fish said he realized the aggressor nation embargo was a hobby of former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, but had been recommended also by the present Administration. Turning to the Democrats, he said, "Stimson is with you on an embargo against aggressors, he is with you on the tariff, and if you want him you can have him, but if you take him for God's sake keep him."

Meanwhile, the Bolivian government took formal exception to the statement made Tuesday by Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a letter to the House Foreign Affairs Committee that both Bolivia and Paraguay "have refused to accept the carefully considered proposals for the restoration of peace which have been presented for their consideration."

David Alvestigui, Bolivian foreign affairs minister, in a cable presented at the State Department by Enrique Finot, that country's Minister here, protested that "Bolivia has always considered with the best spirit all suggestions of peace, having supported invariably a juridical solution as recognized by the League of Nations in its latest report, and as Mr. Hull appreciated previously at the Montevideo conference."

Alvestigui contended that in negotiations with the League of Nations commission Bolivia "made the greatest concessions in favor of peace," that it was not Bolivia which walked out on the Washington conference of mediation, and that "neither did this country break the League Covenant with a declaration of war."

On leaving the State Department, Finot said he had expressed the view to Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles that an embargo on arms shipments to Bolivia would violate the treaty of commerce and amity between the United States and his country.

"What was this gent's first name?" a reporter asked.

Darrow smiled.

"See, anyone who thinks anything is important is a fool," he replied.

"Codes and—adjectives, too, eh?" Darrow shot back.

"But you're here on a social call, aren't you?" he was asked.

"I'll have to give you a politician's answer—maybe yes, maybe no," the attorney retorted.

The door of Johnson's office swung open.

"Hello, hello, Mr. Darrow," Johnson boomed.

"Hello, general," Darrow answered.

Impeachment Of Woodward Recommended

House Judiciary Group Votes 15-5 in Case of Chicago Judge.

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday voted, 15 to 5, to recommend the impeachment of Federal District Judge Charles E. Woodward, of Chicago.

The committee probably will make a decision on the cases of District Judges James H. Wilkerson and Walter Lindley, also of Chicago, today.

Chairman Hatton Sumners, of the committee, said that the vote was taken after the committee had scrutinized carefully Woodward's entire record in office.

"We made the recommendation for impeachment on the whole matter concerning Woodward," Sumners said. "We did not consider any one specific case but may start action on his entire record."

Sumners said the resolution requesting the House to vote for Woodward's impeachment would be drafted and submitted within the next day or so.

The committee today will continue to discuss the Woodward case. Sumners said a "delicate matter" would be discussed. He refused to amplify his statements.

In event the impeachment resolution is approved by the House, Woodward will be tried by the Senate, possibly after the adjournment of Congress.

and former member of Barrow's Southwest gang, working with the authorities, had promised him protection at his home.

As the officers fired, Barrow opened a door of his small gray sedan and attempted to raise his gun. So did Bonnie Parker, but both were shot before they could pull the trigger.

In the wrecked car were three Army rifles, two sawed-off shotguns, a dozen pistols and large quantites of ammunition, besides Bonnie Parker's machine gun. The bodies were left temporarily in the automobile awaiting the coroner's arrival.

Then the officers towed Barrow's car with the bodies into Arcadia. Barrow's head was hanging out of the window and the woman's body was bent as if she had been trying to duck the officers' fire.

Throngs of curious residents—estimated at 2,000—came to view the car.

With Hamer and Hinton in the ambush near here were B. M. Gault, highway patrolman; Bob Alcorn, of Dallas County, Tex., and Louisiana officers.

Bank Was to Be Robbed.

Sheriff Jordan, of Bienville Parish, said he had received a tip that the First National Bank of Arcadia was to be robbed on Wednesday or Thursday and immediately had notified Texas officers.

Barrow came from Benton, La., yesterday and passed through Gibsland, La., about 4 p. m. and again this morning, Jordan said. Jordan and his deputy, Paul M. Oakley, were waiting at the top of the hill with the Texans.

In Dallas, Mrs. Henry Barrow, mother of Barrow, cried in anguish.

"I prayed only last night," she sobbed, "that I might see him alive again, just once more."

Barrow's father, working at his filling station, west of Dallas, made only one remark. He said he guessed his wife would be going to Louisiana.

Bonnie Parker's mother, Mrs. Emma Parker, also a resident of Dallas, fainted when informed by telephone of her daughter's death.

Bit by bit, Hamer, one of the best-known peace officers in Texas, and his aids had pieced together a map of the highways Barrow was in the habit of using. Several weeks ago they barely missed the outlaw and his companion in this same section.

Since then, the officers had been "sitting and waiting."

Barrow, whose custom was to shoot on the drop of a hat and to escape in high-powered automobiles, was wanted in several States for charges ranging from small thefts to murder. He was accused of killing a dozen men, most of them officers.

Bonnie Parker, wife of a convict, was charged by officers with having taken an active part in most of Barrow's recent crimes. She, too, was known as vain and boastful.

Went Heavily Armed.

Several times she was photographed with her belt weighted down with pistols.

The couple's life became more and more harried of late as the law gradually closed in around them. Darting out of an isolated retreat at midnight, they would drive at furious speed to some other rendezvous—sometimes several hundred miles away. Resting only a few hours, they would dash on again.

Bonnie Parker was belived to have been with Barrow and his brother, Marvin, when a posse cornered the gang near Dexter, Iowa, July 24, 1933. Marvin was killed, but Clyde and Bonnie Parker escaped.

"I'm Not Surprised," Says Bonnie's Sister

Fort Worth, Tex., May 23 (AP).—"I'm not surprised; I have been expecting it to end this way," Mrs. Billie Mace, 21, said today when told her sister, Bonnie Parker, had been killed by officers in Louisiana.

Mrs. Mace is in the county jail on murder charges growing out of the slaying of two highway patrolmen near Grapevine, April 1, a crime for which her sister and Clyde Barrow already had been indicted.

asserted Burke. "This, however, I can say. Mrs. Fontaine is somewhere under the jurisdiction of Metropolitan police."

After her recovery, Mrs. Fontaine was whisked to a hiding place in Washington under guard.

The finger first began to point at Kauffman when Mrs. Fontaine talked. Police say he was one of eight or nine men Mrs. Fontaine named as she lay on her hospital bed, fearing another attempt on her life. The men formed a ring, the members of which are wanted for three murders, a bank holdup, a $30,000 cigarette hijacking near Weldon, N. C., and numerous minor robberies.

At Upper Darby, officials linked Kauffman with the "Meadows Mob." R. George Harvey, chief of the United States Secret Service in Philadelphia, declared Kauffman was known as a machine-gunner and hijacker.

A dragnet of Secret Service agents and police had been falling around Kauffman ever since the Fontaine shooting.

Kauffman Was Wanted Here.

Kauffman's description was checked carefully after his body was found. A card in his pocket identified him as Jack Klein, believed to be an alias.

His hair and eyes were dark brown, his complexion swarthy. A crooked nose and several gold teeth further aided identification. He was 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighed 135 pounds.

Moley Advises U. S. Agent Arm To Curb Crime

investigate cases too numerous for its personnel."

At the same time, Prof. Moley, who passed his last days with the Administration organizing the Justice Department's new war against hoodlums, warned against "a great unwieldly administrative machine which would collapse of its own weight."

The center of gravity of the police machine must still remain with the States, which should be solely responsible in handling most of the crimes within their boundaries, he said.

Scores Copeland Bill.

The former Assistant Secretary of State, who left the President's official family to become an editor, gave no sweeping indorsement of all crime legislation now pending in Congress.

He went out of his way to denounce Senator Royal S. Copeland's bill for organizing a United States "Scotland Yard" by commissioning State officers as special agents of the Justice Department as "thoroughly unsound."

It would "open the doors wide to political patronage by the States" and make Justice agents out of men not selected by the department or responsible to it, he said.

He doubted both constitutionality and "utility" of a bill to nationalize all identification data, and dismissed another with the statement that President Roosevelt already has authority to consolidate investigative agencies.

Moley will deal with necessary administrative agencies in the forthcoming second installment of his three-part report. He is expected to urge consolidation of a number of units, including the division of investigation, theshr Division of Investigation, the Postal Inspection Service and the Treasury's famous Secret Service.

The President's one-man crime commission contrasted the Justice Department's "commendable" record in combating crime with what he called "the miserable failures registered by the Prohibition Division during the past 15 years.

Warns Against Miracles.

But, he admonished, the public should not expect "miracles" to be accomplished by Federal authority, adding:

"An occasional setback must be expected and should not be viewed as failure of the Federal Government to perform its proper functions with adequate efficiency."

Moley traced development of the viewpoint seeking enlargement in Federal criminal jurisdiction largely to hearings conducted by the Copeland sub-committee on racketeering. He balanced this against the warning given by Chairman Hatton Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, "that caution be observed in launching the Federal Government upon a vast bureaucratic undertaking, which might result in weakening the crime repressive influence of the States quite as much as it strengthened that of the central government."

Homicide Law Urged as Curb On Auto Death

Safety Conference Favors Uniform Regulation as Remedy for Evil.

An automobile driver who through recklessness or negligence causes a death could be sentenced to one year in prison and find as much as $1,000 under a provision of a model law proposed yesterday at the National Highway Safety Conference.

The crime would be defined as negligent homicide. Such a law already is in effect in a number of States. The conference proposes to urge its general adoption. A law of this kind also is being urged by District traffic and police officials.

The conference opened its three-day general session with a talk by Secretary Roper. At the conclusion of his speech the delegates, numbering nearly 1,000 and including police and traffic officials from nearly every State, began consideration of proposed uniform regulations. Committees have been working a year on the proposals, which cover every possible traffic situation, both rural and urban and which if adopted by Legislatures and city councils would give the country a uniform system of regulation.

The first two days of the conference are to be devoted to general discussion of all the proposals and final action is expected Friday.

30,000 Killed Yearly.

"Death on wheels has become one of the most shocking and terrifying evils in the life of our Nation," Roper told the conference. "Over 30,000 people are killed in the United States each year as a result of traffic accidents and approximately 800,000 are injured. The loss measured in dollars and cents is greater than the yearly cost of our entire public school system."

Roper pointed out the necessity for enforcing traffic laws and regulations.

"Under our form of government the fundamental responsibility for safety of the public on the streets and highways rests with the individual States," he said. "The function of the Government is that of promoting cooperative action and aiding in the organization and coordination of national efforts. Municipalities must serve as the rallying points for this program of constructive action and organized efforts.

Pedestrian Must Help.

"It is a common saying that motor traffic knows no State lines. Clearly, there is need for putting all traffic control measures upon a reasonable basis of uniformity. It is one of the dominant needs in our present unsatisfactory traffic situation."

The pedestrian, Roper said, as well as the motorist, must be impressed with his responsibility.

"In street and highway safety," he said, "we often tend to place all the responsibility upon the driver. In order to make both the educational and enforcement features successful, the pedestrian must be encouraged to do his full share in helping to fulfill the objectives set forth by this conference."

Car Thief May Be Murderer

Slain Man Is Buried as Police Hunt Mystery Man.

A stolen car, taken from near the Anacostia golf course early Sunday, may lead police to solution of the brutal murder of Andrew Paul Rice, 35-year-old railroad hand.

The trail of the thief led authorities to La Plata, Md., where the machine was found abandoned. From there police went to Dahlgren, Va., after it was learned a man was seen to leave the car and ferry across Pope Creek.

Capt. B. W. Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, took over personal supervision of the pursuit and said the man was traced to near Fredericksburg, Va. There his trail ended.

The stolen machine was listed to Charles J. Tolson, of the 1700 block of W street southeast, and had been parked by Tolson Saturday night.

Rice was buried yesterday at his home near Alberene, in Albermarle County, Va. His parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Banks Rice, of Alberene; two brothers, E. D. Rice, of Alberene, and Orville L. Rice, of Leavenworth, Kans., and a sister, Mrs. Blanche Hogue, of Maryland Park, Md., survive.

The petition was indorsed by the supervisors and will be forwarded to the State Highway Commission in Richmond for further action. The road runs from Langley to Great Falls, Dranesville and Forestville, joining the Alexandria-Leesburg pike at Dranesville.

Ickes Attacks Elliott on Oil Favor Charge

Says Statement Is Only a Political Move to Aid Californian.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday unloosed a blast at John B. Elliott, California Democratic committee's vice chairman and manager of Senator McAdoo, for having been charged by a California oil producers' association with having exercised favoritism in his administration of the petroleum code.

Elliott, active in oil affairs here, is a director of the California organization.

Ickes said that his attention had been drawn to the charge, and to another that the Administration-favored Thomas oil bill would build up monopoly. These, he said, had been published by the California association.

"No two statements could be farther from the truth," Ickes said. "I feel that they were issued more as propaganda to help John B. Elliott of California politically than to portray actual conditions.

"Elliott and the very small group he has gathered around him in California, representing only a fractional percentage of the Pacific Coast independents and industry, have always opposed any measure of regulation that would handicap his ambition to boss things in that area, or that would prevent his small group from producing and refining at will, regardless of the damage done to the industry as a whole."

Mr. Ickes did not spare personalities in a statement issued over his signature as oil administrator.

"Elliott, with his self-advertised knowledge of the oil industry, should know it is physically impossible to help the independents without helping the major companies, because the latter, by virtue of their size alone, will share in all benefits. But I can advise him and the association that no order I have issued discriminates against the small operator, nor will any discrimination by other oil interests be tolerated."

The administrator also defended the Thomas oil bill, now pending in Congress, declaring that unless production is balanced with consumer demands—as the bill proposes to do—a monopoly will be firmly intrenched.

With Walter Teagle, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Elliott advised Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson in framing the petroleum code.

J. P. Gregory Is Dead, Age 53

Illness Contracted During Service in France Proves Fatal.

An illness contracted while he was serving in France as a captain in the Sanitary Corps during the World War was blamed for the death yesterday of Joseph Paul Gregory, 53, accountant for the Tariff Commission. Mr. Gregory, a native Washingtonian, died in Walter Reed Hospital.

A son of the late John J. and Mary Gregory, also lifelong residents of the Capital, Mr. Gregory lived at 61 Girard street northeast. He served several enlistments in the Army, entering the service in 1903. Upon his return from France he served in the Surgeon General's office and was honorably discharged in 1920 with the rank of captain.

Surviving Mr. Gregory, who was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion, are his wife, Mrs. Julia G. Gregory, and two sisters, Mrs. Grace T. Startzel and Mrs. Catharine Biondi.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Saturday at 8:30 a. m., with requiem mass at St. Martin's Catholic Church. Burial will be with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Two-Job Bills Held Doomed This Session

Proposed Laws Would Keep Party Officials Out of U.S. Employ.

Proposed legislation, urged by the Administration early this year to deal with political lobbying and to prevent party officials from holding Government jobs, appeared last night to be doomed for the present session.

Senator King, chairman of a Senate judiciary sub-committee assigned to study various pending bills and to report legislation to the Senate, said last night that rush of other legislative work had prevented the committee from giving any attention to this subject.

This legislation would prevent members of the Democratic and Republican National Committees from holding Federal jobs or from soliciting campaign contributions. One of the bills, introduced by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, was the result of the appointment of Horatio J. Abbott, Michigan Democratic National committeeman, to be collector of internal revenue at Detroit. Abbott resigned as collector Tuesday, after it had been charged that employes in his office had solicited political contributions. He still remains as National committeeman.

Evidence gathered by treasury agents at Detroit will be turned over to the Department of Justice, the Treasury said yesterday, also announcing suspension of John H. Tighue, deputy collector at Detroit, and George W. Woods, a revenue agent.

Despite President Roosevelt's suggestion last January that political committeemen should not also hold Federal appointments, at least 14 members of the Democratic National committee are still in the two-job class. These include Postmaster General James A. Farley and his first assistant, W. W. Howes, of South Dakota.

Six have resigned from the committee because of Federal appointments.

Move Rumored For Filibuster On Tariff Bill

Senate Leaders Say They Will Prolong Session to Fight It.

(Associated Press.)

Rumors that certain Senators were trying to organize a filibuster to prevent a vote on the tariff bill reached the ears of Senate Democratic leaders late yesterday and they immediately announced they were prepared to bring pressure to bear, with longer sessions, if this were true.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority chieftain, told newspapermen at the conclusion of a week of general debate with no end in sight:

"A rumor has reached me that one or two Senators are trying to perfect an organization for a filibuster, but I'm inclined to think it will be averted.

"In any event, developments in the next day or two will decide whether there is a filibuster planned."

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, denied any members on his side were involved.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, in charge of the bill, sounded out the opposition on an agreement to limit debate. McNary said he knew of only four more speeches from his side and until they were made he preferred not to agree on a limitation.

Most of yesterday's debate centered around a demand by Senator Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, that the State Department furnish the Senate a copy of a trade agreement negotiated with Colombia in anticipation, he claimed, of passage of the tariff-bargaining bill.

Democratic leaders objected to the resolution and Harrison announced just before debate ended for the day the State Department would not object to sending the agreement to the Senate if Colombia consented. He said the department had asked the South American republic if it had any objection.

Deflation Debate Not Held Before Court.

The subject of deflation came up in Traffic Court yesterday—but there was nobody there to discuss it.

Merits of the question were ready for debate when a clerk called the name of Nelson D. Ricker, 50, a taxi driver. He failed to answer, so the issue was closed and a $5 forfeiture noted. He was charged with tampering with an automobile by Detective John Apostolides, of the Crime Prevention Bureau.

The deflation subject was open for discussion when Apostolides said Ricker was letting air from the tires of parked cars in the 1700 block of R street northwest.

Gas Station Robbed Manager Injured

A gas station manager was struck over the head and robbed and a bailiff, who answered the alarm, was overpowered at the point of a gun last midnight by two colored men at the District line.

Isaac Lambert, 55, of 1311 South Capitol street, was felled by a blow from a pistol butt and the till of a gas station in the 900 block of Kenilworth avenue, where he was night attendant, robbed of $30.

Lawrence Dayton, Bladensburg bailiff, overhauled the fleeing car of the assailants, only to be held up in turn when he ordered them to surrender. He was relieved of badge, watch and several dollars by the bandits before they continued their flight.

Lambert's condition was not regarded as serious by attending physicians.

Hungarian Exile Would Be Buried in U. S.

The remains of a Hungarian exile who distinguished himself as a Union general in the Civil War and later as an American diplomat in Russia would be returned to this country for burial in Arlington Cemetery under a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Cochran (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Gen. George Pomutz, who now lies buried in Leningrad, Russia, was adjutant of the Fifteenth Iowa Volunteers during the Civil War. In 1865 he was appointed consul general to St. Petersburg.

He died in poverty there on October 12, 1882, following a distinguished career.

A Local Disturbance.

Full details of the Minneapolis riot which accompanied a strike of truck drivers are not available in Washington. Minnesota's pugnacious Congressman (Representative Shoemaker) is charged with inciting the strikers to action, and Gov. Olson is accused of encouraging them by a declaration that he is a "radical." Shoemaker was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. The merits of these accusations are for the courts and the electorate of Minnesota to decide. To outside observers the one thing which appears certain at this time is that the disturbance was of a local nature.

Strikes have occurred in many parts of the country in recent weeks. Few of them have resulted in violence and rioting. Differences between employers and employes are usually adjusted through negotiations or arbitration. The fact that 5,000 strikers engaged in a fight with police in Minneapolis suggests, to say the least, inadequate precautions against violation of the law. But that is clearly a problem for State and local authorities. It does not appear that this unfortunate event has any bearing upon the labor legislation which is before Congress.

The exercise of police powers is clearly a State function. Decrees from Washington, as has been amply proved, can not take the place of local law enforcement. Certainly it would be unwise to bestow upon any national board the responsibility of dictating settlement of local labor disputes. Regional and national boards may serve a useful purpose as arbitrators, but nothing would be gained by the concentration of autocratic powers over the employer-employe relationship into the hands of a bureau at Washington.

If there is any moral to be deduced from the Minneapolis situation, it is the necessity for more vigilance and understanding on the part of communities in handling their own labor problems.

An Outrageous "Rider."

A serious situation has been created by the action of the House Banking and Currency Committee in amending the bill passed by the Senate, providing for extension of the temporary plan for deposit insurance. The committee proposes to raise the amount of insurable deposits from $2,500 to $5,000 and to make State banks, which are not members of the Federal Reserve System, eligible for participation in the permanent guaranty plan after 1936.

As a crowning outrage, it has attached a "rider" which provides for a modified plan to pay off depositors in closed banks. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation would be empowered to issue debentures up to five times the amount of its subscribed capital and to use not over half these obligations (fully guaranteed by the Government) to loan upon or to purchase assets of any banks that have been closed since the end of 1929 and prior to January, 1934. The cost of this operation, placed at $1,000,000,000, would be less than that incurred under the McLeod plan, and it is also permissive. Nevertheless, even with these modifications, the objections in principle to Government guarantees of losses to depositors in closed banks remain unassailable.

Strange as it may seem, it has been suggested that the McLeod bill petition which is now being circulated among House members is a declaration of independence from political domination comparable to the famous document which declared the independence of the colonies from the mother country. It is noticeable, however, that the names of Representatives from Maryland and Virginia, two of the original colonies, are not on the roll of honor. Perhaps these non-signers not only cherish a belief in individual rights, but are convinced that personal and political freedom entails acceptance of responsibility for individual actions.

There is no excuse for delaying approval of the proposal to extend the temporary system of deposit guaranty. Under the present plan, 95 per cent of all depositors, and 55,000,000 accounts representing $16,000,000,000 of deposits are protected. It is admittedly not feasible to introduce the permanent guaranty system on July 1, since examinations to determine whether banks are solvent and can qualify for participation are time consuming. Prolongation of the present temporary system is necessary, therefore, in order to permit careful preliminary investigations, without which the permanent system would be unsound at its inception.

Under the circumstances it is particularly outrageous for the House Banking and Currency Committee to take advantage of an emergency to attach an irrelevant and highly dangerous "rider" to a bill whose passage is imperative. The country dare not embark upon a system of general deposit guaranty without adequate preparation, under conditions that would spell certain disaster.

For A Mess Of Coffee.

It is "purely a matter of business," asserts the Consul General of El Salvador in Tokyo, in justification of the action of his government in recognizing Manchukuo. And in explanation the representative of the little Central American republic points out that with the curtailment of German imports of coffee, on which the prosperity of El Salvador depends, it has become imperative to find outlets elsewhere.

The expectation is that such outlets can be found not in Manchukuo, where coffee is consumed to about the same extent as kaoliang in this country, but in Japan itself. This admission strengthens the indications that there has been some sort of deal between Japan and El Salvador, whereby the former secures the first recognition—other than her own—of the puppet empire of Manchukuo, while El Salvador gets export markets in return. It is possible that the tea-drinking Japanese will turn to coffee as a fair price for their political gain. At least the Salvadoreans hope they will.

But whatever the nature and results of the bargain the action which has been taken is important. This is the first breach in the wall of nonrecognition with which the United States and the League of Nations have ringed Manchukuo as a result of the aggressive way in which its independence was established by Japan. The breach is the more important because of the fact that El Salvador is a member, albeit very inactive, of the League of Nations. For it is only a little over two years since the League Assembly passed a resolution declaring that "it is incumbent upon the members of the League of Nations not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the Covenant of the League of Nations or to the Pact of Paris."

To condemn El Salvador for its easy surrender of principle to opportunism would be easy. That government has certainly taken an action in which it can feel no pride. And the action is the more curious as coming from a weak nation whose very existence is dependent on the cooperative curtailment of that form of imperialism which Japan has been practicing in China. Yet, from another viewpoint, it can be said that the recognition is one of shrewd realism. Manchukuo exists. Nobody expects Japan to abandon her vassal. So why not recognize a fait accompli, if anything is to be gained thereby?

That is the problem which, soon or late, the rest of the world has got to confront in the case of Manchukuo. If the state of international organization will not permit effective restraints on an aggressor nation, is it worth while to maintain ineffective restraints? Nations, like individuals, will answer that question according to their varying standards of honor and social responsibility. But few will sell out without more thought on the deeper meaning of their action than seems to have been given by Gen. Maximiliano Martinez, the dictator of misnamed El Salvador.

Two Aged Antagonists.

Perhaps we are all too prone to regard youth as the season of controversy, age as the period of peace. After all John Brown was "Old" John Brown when he came to Harpers Ferry, and, though certainly not old, Margaret Sanger was born—if she will pardon our mentioning it—in 1883.

One remembered her birthday on reading yesterday's papers. Not because of her regretted inability to speak at Hot Springs before the council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Nor yet because of any wonder as to what would have happened to many modern defenders of birth control had birth control been in vogue a generation ago. What impressed us was (a) the fact that, in Mrs. Sanger's absence, birth control was advocated before the federation by Mrs. L. L. Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, whose age is given as 89, while (b) down in Tamaulipas, Mexico, Mrs. Rosario Llinas, evidently an anti-Sangerist, simultaneously became the mother of twins—at the age of 70.

A Case In Point.

Critics should look at the record of the cotton textile industry before hastily concluding that the NRA operates solely to foster monopolies. The cotton code was the first one adopted after passage of the Recovery Act, and has been vigorously administered, despite the fact that the industry covers a large number of independent competing units. Some large organizations representing a substantial capital investment are to be found in the cotton textile field, but there is a conspicuous absence of the semimonopolistic domination established in some of our basic industries.

Under its code the cotton industry has succeeded in reaching restrictive agreements, regarding wages and hours, which the Textile Institute had long tried in vain to secure. Greater equality of working conditions has also been obtained in Northern and Southern mills, and systematic reduction of output has become feasible. The industry is now preparing to carry out a general curtailment program which will reduce machine working hours about 25 per cent for a period of from 4 to 12 weeks. At the same time an effort will be made to retain employes by spreading work while excess stocks of cotton goods are being absorbed.

Whether this code succeeds or fails in the long run in improving conditions within the industry, whether one approves or disapproves the general restriction policy, the evidence indicates that it is being generally supported. The explanation is simple. The industry was highly organized before the NRA came into being and it welcomed the opportunity to try industrial self-regulation through cooperation. The hostility to the NRA felt by certain business elements has been largely due to rash efforts to force organization upon industries unprepared for it. As small business units are likely to predominate in ill-organized industries, premature efforts to bring them under the Recovery Act are almost sure to miscarry, creating a somewhat false impression of bias against the small man as such.

As a matter of fact, the small business existing on sufferance, and often compelled to follow policies dictated by powerful competitors, has been a problem for many years. Passage of the Recovery Act was welcomed by many representatives of these subservient groups in the hope that codification would strengthen their position. In some instances such expectations may be realized. In others they have undoubtedly been disappointed. But in all cases, the reasons for failure go deeper than is perceived by those who assert that the NRA is necessarily an encouragement to monopoly.

The Forgotten Issue.

Horatio J. Abbott's resignation as collector of internal revenue at Detroit revives an issue which the Administration has not yet squarely faced. A few months ago President Roosevelt expressed indignation because some members of the Democratic National Committee were taking advantage of their political affiliations as lobbyists in Washington. Several members of the committee resigned and bills were introduced in Congress with a view to curtailing the improper encroachment of politics upon Federal administrative functions. But this zeal for reform soon subsided and virtually nothing more was done until the Abbott episode arose in Detroit.

As National committeeman Mr. Abbott has been patronage dispenser for Michigan. In a large measure the choice of postmasters has been in his hands. He is accused of collecting campaign funds from loyal partisans assigned to jobs of this kind. Likewise it is alleged that he is responsible for an attempt to collect $50,000 from an automobile manufacturer for party purposes. Even without proof of these accusations, it is a distinct gain to have one who is so deeply immersed in politics removed from the responsible position of tax collector. If these charges are well founded, his resignation as a national committeeman is also in order.

In proper perspective, the Abbott case appears only an incident in a very large problem. Two other members of the Democratic National Committee are serving as collectors of internal revenue. Several others hold important Federal offices such as collector of customs, Treasurer of the United States and Postmaster General. Even when all cases of this kind are put together they do not measure the pernicious effect of politics upon the administrative functions of government. Virtually all collectors of taxes and customs and the higher class postmasters are selected on the basis of partisanship instead of merit, whether or not they hold party offices.

It is futile to deal with a problem of this sort by forcing isolated resignations. To cope with the spoils system by ousting an official every time a major scandal arises is like treating individual cases of typhoid in a community with a polluted water supply. Yet the Administration has allowed its plan to bring all first, second and third class postmasters under civil service regulations to be sabotaged by subordinates. Bills designed to curb lobbying by influential party officials have been pigeonholed on Capitol Hill without a hearing. Nothing more than pious gestures in the direction of the merit system and toward curtailment of subterranean political influence seems to be in sight. Indeed, it may be asked whether all gestures toward housecleaning of this sort are not a pretense so long as the chairman of the Democratic National Committee retains the position of Postmaster General.

Disillusioned.

Many men have come to Washington with the avowed purpose of changing the course of events. Nearly all of them have gone away disappointed or remained to face their disillusionment. Generally, however, one keeps silent on the disinclination of the world to be swayed by one's influence.

When some candid soul admits his helplessness in the swirling current of popular opinion and retires to the solitude of his own garden, where his thoughts may remain sacred, he is almost certain to arouse a twinge of regret. One immediately gets the impression that he is the sort of philosophic fellow whose counsel is worth having. In other words, it takes a wise man to recognize the futility of his own efforts and withdraw from the stampede when there is danger of being trampled.

Representative Terrell has decided to give up trying to reform Congress and to return quietly to the Southland. For months now this little Texan has conducted a vigorous campaign against New Deal measures which he considers unconstitutional and repugnant to American traditions. But what is the use of hurling insignificant negative votes against the House steam roller? Congressman Terrell thinks his health and peace of mind are more important than Lilliputian efforts to restrain a slogan-blinded body of representatives whom he accuses of voting "against their own convictions." Similarly Charles Edward Russell, whose acid views on the NRA find place in the Darrow report, asserts himself weary of the "hopeless mess" by which he is surrounded and wants to retire to a well-loved spot on the shore of Lake Geneva, where he can "just live."

It is not cowardice but a sense of individual futility which prompts these two apostles of completely opposite viewpoints to recoil from the Washington scene. Neither the halls of Congress nor the NRA are inviting abodes for philosophers. In this era of intellectual emancipation there is more slavish devotion to shibboleths than the world has seen in a long time. It is not surprising that uncompromising crusaders, regardless of their particular "ism," are inclined to go back to their gardens.

A Modern Androcles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much pleased to read the article by Laura L. Kerlin on the intelligence of "Dumb Animals," published in The Post of May 18.

Yes; such animals not only have intelligence, but have on many occasions been known to show deep gratitude for kindness extended to them, even over a great period of years.

At this time while the gift of Mr. Ringling to Washington of the venerable elephant, "Babe," now domiciled at the Zoo, is so fresh in our minds, it may not be amiss to tell the story of the gratitude of the elephant who perhaps may have been "Babe," as it happened many years ago when she was in her own native land. It seems that a young man had been engaged with others to capture foreign wild animals for a few cities where zoos were maintained and for some circus owners. One morning this young fellow while out alone noticed some strange tracks. He decided to follow and after a mile or so he came up to an elephant which did not seem frightened, standing in some underbrush. Walking close, he saw that the animal was holding its front foot up as if in great pain. A large thorn was lodged in the raised foot. Taking out his pliers, the young man pulled the thorn out as easily as possible and let the elephant make its escape.

Many years after, while attending a circus, accompanied by his grandchildren and seated close to the ringside, 10 or 12 large elephants were about to pass, one of them stopped, looked closely at him, walked over to the ringside, put its trunk over the ropes and, gently taking him by the waist, walked quickly over and placed him in a reserved seat. That was gratitude, and perhaps it was "Babe."

For 30-Day Leave Restoration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am in full agreement with the letter from "A Daily Reader" about Federal leave, except the last part of the latter, where the writer unfortunately mixes up annual leave with sick leave.

I do not understand why so many employes can never ask for one privilege without unnecessarily mixing it up with another. This is responsible for much of the trouble in which we find ourselves.

All the arguments advanced by the writers in favor of the 30-days leave could as well be marshaled in favor of 30 days of sick leave. There are many unfortunate persons in the service, among them the war-maimed persons, who would have to lose pay if ample sick leave were not available. The person who sees no need of sick leave is either smugly unaware of the inequalities of nature or else lacks the imagination to foresee that sickness may come to us all.

At any rate, there is utterly no reason to talk of sick leave now. The question has been fairly and reasonably settled. The only question before us now is the restoration of the 30-days annual leave. This we need and this we want. It is hoped that every employe will rally behind the simple demand for an unqualified restoration of our old privilege. GORDON L. FRAMER.

Nantucket Lightship Disaster.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my thanks for your editorial on the "Victim of Her Own Efficiency." I was hoping some one would write as you have written of this disaster. In view of modern appliances, such as the fog horn and other devices, an accident of this kind should be impossible. Apparently this tragedy was due to criminal carelessness or neglect. I join with you in wishing for a most rigid investigation.

A. H. THOMPSON.

Washington, May 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please print the following in your editorial page concerning the running down of the lightship Nantucket by the liner Olympic.

The lightship is equipped with all of the best devices to prevent collision; as follows:

1. A submarine bell which sounds a signal at regular intervals and also gives the distance and direction the sound is coming from.

2. A fog siren which blows at regular intervals and can be heard from two to four miles. I have heard it myself at that distance.

3. A radio beam. This beam, when picked up by a vessel, gives the direction from whence the signal comes and is most always accurate. The sounding device on the liner which would have shown the depth when near the lightship.

4. There are the shore compass stations. The stations give out radio bearing when requested. So you can see if the master has taken a bearing from a shore station and one from the lightship, he would have obtained a cross-bearing and where the lines intersected would have been his position and collision would have been avoided.

Opposed to Street Parking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me through the columns of your valuable paper to express my sentiments regarding the practice of all-night parking on the streets of Washington. I heartily agree with those who are opposing the use of the streets for the purpose. It affords me extreme pleasure to join them in their efforts to have this unwise, undesirable, unsightly and unwarranted practice abolished.

The use of the streets for all-night parking is a menace and hindrance to the Fire Department. It might also add it interferes with and is a menace to any pedestrian attempting to cross the streets day and night, often obstructing the view of approaching machines from different directions. All-day and night parking is objectionable to many property owners, who at times do not have ingress or egress to their own property. Their space is often occupied by some of these many would-be owners of our streets, some of whom are nonresidents and short-time renters of rooms or apartments. In conclusion, I would say rid the streets of this abuse; prohibit all-day and all-night parking. HENRY F. ASH.

NEW YORK, MAY, 22.

A New Code of Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be enough sentiment against the present era of crime to suggest the changing and simplifying of all our laws as a remedy.

We must have a new code of law as a first step in combating the era of crime, even though it is necessary to have the cooperation of lawyers and judges in writing such a code.

We must have a new law, simplified so that the average citizen can understand it—with a specific penalty for each violation of the law, with no equivocation or exception—a law written in such a way that there can be only one interpretation.

We do not need the Marines, or even a Scotland Yard, to cope with the gangster with his machine gun. We do need, however, a system requiring inspection of all dwellings in a city at irregular periods—to be determined by the chief of police (not involving search of personal belongings). The proprietor of any rooming house, or any one letting out rooms, should be required to report the presence of any persons who pay regularly but do not have visible means of support. The occupation followed by every adult in this country should be known and, if unoccupied, what is done with spare time. Then we may get at the gangsters' hide-out. True, this would transgress the Constitution; the powers of the Constitution are transgressed in a thousand instances and nobody does anything about it. Will the public support this? If not, then the time is not ripe to improve conditions—let them get worse.

WILLIAM P. THOMAS, Jr.

Young Liberals.

The Bourbons and Tories have done no end of funny things, but nothing equals their attempt to discredit the progressive proposals of the Roosevelt Administration by tagging them as the work of the "young liberal group" or the "youthful members of the brain trusts." The idea, apparently, is that youth and wisdom can not go together, and that the sponsorship of a young man is enough in itself to brand a plan as irresponsible, not to say unworkable.

It is to laugh. Do the forces of reaction know nothing whatever about American history? Do they not know that Thomas Jefferson was a member of the Continental Congress at 32 and the author of the Declaration of Independence at 33? Do they not know Edward Rutledge sat in our first National Legislative body at 25 and signed the Declaration at 27? Have they not heard that John Jay was a member of the Continental Congress at 29 and its president at 34; that he was secretary of foreign affairs while still in his 30s and the first Chief Justice soon afterward? Did they not learn in school that Alexander Hamilton was a legislator at 25, a writer for the Federalist at 29 and the first Secretary of the Treasury at 32?

Why, the truth is that the founding fathers, whom the seekers of privilege profess so to reverence, were a group of young bloods, by the side of whom the Tugwells and Landises now in Washington appear as a circle of doddering ancients! And the list can be expanded indefinitely. Patrick Henry was 29 when he went to the Virginia House of Burgesses, and still in his 30s when he made his famous speech on the eve of the Revolution. James Madison was a member of the Virginia Constitutional Convention at 25 and and a delegate to the Continental Congress at 29. John Marshall went to the Legislature of his State when he was 27 and to the Constitutional Convention when 33. And so on.

"Young liberal group!" Pardon us if we find it difficult to conceal our amusement.

The Post Impressionist

The Holiday Muddle.

Postoffice, Thursday.

"ONE of the things that's wrong with the United States," writes the Major, "is its national holiday system. And one of the things that's wrong with the system is that it isn't a system. It's a mess.

"I'm not kicking about Church holidays or State holidays, but about National ones. Lots of other countries arrange theirs. We just let ours happen: pure chance, aggravated by Act of Congress. The result is we've too many where they're no good to anybody, and not enough in calendar-spots where holidays are needed.

"If you want to do something useful in your Column, for a change, why," the Major sneeringly demands of us, "don't you crusade for changes in our National holidays?"

In the first place, we object to the word "crusade." We don't think much of those historic mob-movements which coined it. The purpose of the Crusades was devout, but the methods of the Crusaders too frequently degenerated into sheer spoilation. The recapture of the Holy Land from the infidel was a Christian ideal; the plundering of the Christian East by the Christian West almost outdid the worst things told by Tasso about Salah-ed-din Yusuf in "Jerusalem Delivered." And, once they get going, a good many modern crusades partake of their predecessors' pernicious points.

In the second place, we are never controversial—in the Column. We reserve the delights of controversy for our home life. The nearest we come to being controversial—in the Column—is stinging correspondents into controversy.

And, in the third and last place, we have at present no desire to do anything "useful." Washingtonian warm weather conveys a strong disinclination to be useful.

Nevertheless, we welcome other people's usefulness, within reason, and we are party to no pact banning anybody else from employing war as an instrument of policy against whatever riles him—so long as our own pet prejudices remain uninvolved. To such persons the Column is open. That leaves us more time to worry about how we'll survive the summer.

So we quote some of the Major's letter.

"This country of ours," the Major runs on, "has fewer holidays than any other country, and, as I said, those that we do have are mostly at the wrong seasons. Leave Christmas out of the discussion, for religious reasons—which means leaving the whole of December out, because Christmas is our only National holiday in December—and what have you got for the other eleven months?

"We've one National holiday in January and two in February—unless you're one of these wild winter-sporters, there's hardly any chance of spending those festivals out of doors. In March we've no such holiday at all, and only one in April; and yet March and April are two periods when big stretches of America experience mild spells that would make a holiday fit for something beside the movies.

"June weather was made for holidays, but we haven't any in June, either—and we haven't any in August, when everybody needs a rest holiday at all, and only one in September and only one in October. May? Just one again and that, as usual, comes more than half the time in the middle of the week so we can't nail a Sunday on to it. The same's true of July and October.

"Isn't it about as idiotic an arrangement as you could find outside of an asylum?

"Here's the New Deal, with all its talk about 'Leisure' and the 'Benefits of Repose'—and yet our National holidays are like that! If the President wants to be remembered as the originator of the New Leisure, why doesn't he tackle this problem?

"He wouldn't have to be radical at the start. He could Tory-foot around with it, a bit at a time.

"For instance," the Major demands, "how much work does any employer get out of his employes when they knock off on a Wednesday evening for a Thursday holiday, and come back to their jobs just for the full Friday and the half Saturday? How much work does he get out of that day-and-a-half sandwich? Well, is there any real reason in history why Thanksgiving Day shouldn't be the last Saturday in November?

"And where is the sense in having Decoration Day on May 30? Why couldn't it just as well be the last Saturday in May, so's we could get a Saturday and a Sunday together?

"The President could make a conservative start with those two holidays, having Congress back of him. And you ought to suggest it.

"Anyhow, there's one thing I'm downright sure he'd come across with—sure of it, even if I am a Republican. You could get him to change his birthday.

"That sort of thing's been done before. Didn't some writer or other—Rupert Lewis Stephenson, or somebody—give his birthday away altogether to a girl who was born on the 29th of February? And you know how kings' birthdays are National holidays in their kingdoms, and how lots of kindly kings have changed their birthdays so's their subjects could enjoy them more.

"Well, what a good-natured king can be persuaded to do, I'll bet you a good-natured President could be persuaded to do, easy. I suggest the 5th of July—then there'll be a hundred per cent chance of success for this movement to make F. D.'s birthday a National Holiday.

Eastman, the Great Fearer

ALTHOUGH there are many of the present Administration's policies that wend all over the place and come back to meet themselves there is one thing which has moved definitely straight ahead, steady and unfaltering, which has progressed unerringly toward one set goal. It is Railroad Coordinator Joe Eastman's fear that the Government may have to take over the railroads. Here is something that has persisted since the advent of this Administration gave Eastman an audible voice. Never once has he veered from it save the time he took off to attempt a settlement of the railroad wage controversy. Even this proved such a slight digression as to escape the mind. Almost immediately he was back to his fear.

BARGERON.

It is one of the fascinating phases of the New Deal, this periodical expression of fear by the coordinator. Pick up a paper of most any date during the past year and the chances are good that there in the midst of the murders, the suicides, the marriages and the divorces, in the controversy about the NRA, the securities act and the stock exchange bill—the chances, I say are good, that there you will find a little story that Eastman expresses the fear that the Government may have to take over the railroads.

* * * *

Sometimes it is before an audience in New York, again before one in Kalamazoo, in the South and West, but somewhere he seems always to be expressing this fear. The picture I get of him, in fact, is that of the itinerant fearer, going all over the country with satchel in hand, moving up to unsuspecting groups on the corner or in front of the drug store—easing up to them and expressing his fear and then moving quietly on.

He never waits for an answer or an argument. Before the group can look up or even ask his identity he has gone on his way. I'll bet he has come to be a legend in many communities—that people in their light conversation of nights ask one another:

"Have you seen that mysterious man with the satchel who goes around saying he fears the Government may have to take over the railroads? I wonder who he can be."

* * * *

It's a tribute to his persistency or to the persistency of his cause, I think, that in all of the din of today he can make the expression of his fear heard. He doesn't come through loudly. Rather it is like the steady dropping of water on a rock. Sooner or later it is bound to make a dent.

Apparently this is all he has to do. Seemingly he has been given a roving commission by Mr. Roosevelt to go about the country expressing his fear. He does it well. He is, in fact, an expert on the subject. He has studied it, one might get the impression, to the exclusion of everything else.

At times he and his fear become right spooky, so good is he at his work. It comes to one in the darkness of the night, a nightmare to disturb the sleep, a piercing shriek of a woman or a sound that one can't define but which throws him wide awake in a cold sweat.

Something tells me that it is the railroad owners who had better be acquiring some fear. The coordinator is walking in too straight a line not to have a purpose.

I have a hunch that some morning the railroad owners will wake up to find that they have no more railroads than a pup has kittens. It is then that the coordinator's persistency will have its effect. The people will not be surprised at all or register any feeling. They will recall vaguely that somewhere or somehow they had heard of it long ago.

Mr. Eastman then will have proved to be the greatest fearer of the age.

2 Maryland Homes Hit by Lightning

Frederick, Md., May 23 (Spl.).—During a severe electrical storm yesterday lightning struck the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes D. Baker, on the National highway, 3 miles west of here. Firemen extinguished the blaze with slight damage.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Murdoch, near Ridgeville, was struck by lightning and a portion of the floor in an attic room was ripped. Mrs. Murdoch, her two daughters and son on the first floor were stunned.

Hail fell at Libertytown, Brunswick and Myersville and a windstorm, caused slight damage at Thurmont. A heavy downpour occurred in this city, Walkersville, Woodsboro, New Market and Monrovia. The rain will greatly benefit growing crops.

Cole and Brother Win Fees in Wendel Case

Towson, Md., May 23 (AP).—Representative William P. Cole, Maryland Democrat, and his brother, C. Walter Cole, yesterday won their action to retain fees of $11,843.24 for legal services in obtaining a share of the Wendel fortune for two sisters.

The Misses Caroline S. and Viola E. Shafer, of Stemmers Run, brought the suit in circuit court, charging the fees were excessive. They claimed that after all the attorney fees, taxes and expenses had been deducted from the amount they had received from the estate of the late Ella Wendel, each had only $3,768.30 left.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE DARROW-JOHNSON DEBATE.

Mr. Darrow—I contend that the Blue Eagle lays square eggs.

Gen. Johnson—An eagle's egg is an eagle's egg, regardless of the shape.

Mr. Darrow—But a square egg is no good in a Nation equipped only with round egg cups.

Gen. Johnson—The trouble with you is you have spent so many years of your life keeping clients from behind bars that the idea of even a bird being in the same cage more than a year strikes you as an injustice.

Mr. Darrow—The trouble with you is that you think everybody is out of step but yourself.

Gen. Johnson—You're a fine judge of things like that. If you ever found yourself in step with anybody else you'd throw a fit.

Mr. Darrow—Anyway, we're not marching anywhere these days; we're on a revolving floor.

Gen. Johnson—If you'd stop riding backwards you wouldn't mind it any more than we do.

* * * *

Mr. Darrow—The codes make it easy for the big fellow and hard for the little fellow.

Gen. Johnson—Show me a lawyer who doesn't work the same way.

Mr. Darrow—I insist that the NRA is primarily a first aid to big business.

Gen. Johnson—If it's a crime to furnish oxygen to a sick giant, I'm guilty as charged in the indictment.

Mr. Darrow—Why not show a little big-heartedness to the little fellows?

Gen. Johnson—When I hear of Clarence Darrow defending a midget without any understanding about a counsel fee, I will take his worries over little fellows more seriously.

Mr. Darrow—Say, why all this harsh talk? You and your friends created this committee and named me on it, didn't you?

Gen. Johnson (wincing)—Why remind a man of his terrible mistakes?

* * * *

Mr. Darrow—I didn't ask to be put on your old committee.

Gen. Johnson — We take the blame, but it puzzles us more than it does you.

Mr. Darrow — You could have done worse.

Gen. Johnson—How?

Mr. Darrow—You could have named Ogden Mills.

* * * *

Gen. Johnson—All your contentions raised in your report are mere dogma.

Mr. Darrow—Yes, but hot dogma. If there was nothing in my report that you were afraid of, why did you hold it up for 17 days?

Gen. Johnson—We thought that the idea of a big lawyer getting prompt action on anything would be such a novelty it might kill him. And another thing.

Mr. Darrow—What?

Gen. Johnson — That report couldn't have become any sourer if we held it 17 months.

Mr. Darrow—Lissen, general, the worst is yet to come. I'm submitting a supplemental report in a few weeks.

Gen. Johnson — Awah-h-h-h! Awah-h-h-h-h!

ALL IN THE FAMILY.

Soviet Russia has just honored a 13-year-old boy for snitching on his mother for stealing some grain. It urges other boys to do likewise. We understand special decorations will be awarded the little dears who throw their grandmothers downstairs, furnish false evidence against their fathers and write anonymous letters to the police about their sweet old aunts.

Add similes: as absurd as the theory that a vote of the people on a Darrow-Roosevelt issue would be even close.

Mike Gevins says that a fellow with a radio in his flivver never knows where the next knock is coming from.

RICHARD MIFFLIN KLEBERG, Representative from Texas. Grandson of Richard King, founder of the King ranch, largest in the world (1,250,000 acres). A member of the House Agricultural Committee, he is considered spokesman of Southwest cattle men. Member of a prominent Texas family in an area marked by distinct social castes, he is something of a nobleman. Haughty manner, cool, distant and airy. Shows considerable pride in fancy live stock which he raises. Out-of-doors man, sponsor of conservation legislation; organizer and president of Texas Federated Agricultural Association. Elected to Seventy-second Congress to fill vacancy left by death of Harry M. Wurzbach. Expert huntsman. Robust, stocky, black-haired. Affects soft collars. Conservative, he speaks with cool authority.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Why Climb the Tree When Fruit Can Be Reached?

By Robert Quillen

When this land was raw and uncouth and concious of its crudeness, the rich began the practice of going to Europe in quest of culture. Some of them remained abroad long enough to learn something.

This generation inherited the idea that a trip to Europe gives social distinction, but now the pilgrimage is organized and abbreviated.

There are tour leaders in great number, and these shepherd their flocks along well-worn paths and keep a lively pace to acquire the maximum of culture in a minnmum of time.

Does the tourist see the things that give him an understanding of Europe's institutions and achievements and problems?

Well, if you were arranging a tour of America to show your guests the resources, beauty, power, culture and customs of this country, where would you take them?

German steamship lines are bringing tourists to America, and the treats they offer will show you how well the typical tourist itinerary covers the ground.

The Germans will be shown the sights in New York, Niagara Falls, the Ford plant, the fair in Chicago, a pickle factory in Pittsburgh, the show places in Washington, D. C., and Independence Hall, the Mint and a penitentiary in Philadelphia.

It is, of course, better than nothing. And to visit any region in person, and see and hear and smell it, if only for a week, is more instructive than all the travel books ever written.

But whatever the gain of foreign travel, it is absurd to hunt for culture in other lands while abysmally ignorant of one's own.

It is like studying French before learning English, or going to college without knowledge of the three R's, or wearing a dress suit with plow shoes.

Culture, like charity, should begin at home. And one who has a few months to spare can spend the time most profitably in learning something about his own country and his own people.

Napoleon and His Marshals.

I wonder how much of the widespread adoration of Napoleon among Americans is owing to John S. C. Abbott (1805—1877), brother of Jacob, of the Rollo books.

The two brothers were enormously prolific. John, although an active preacher and pastor (he was for five years pastor of the Howe Street Church, in New Haven, Conn.), said, in the preface to one of his works: "I have written 54 volumes. In every one it has been my endeavor to make the inhabitants of this sad world more brotherly—better and wiser." He died while pastor of the church in Fair Haven, Conn.

Historians naturally did not, do not, and will not take him seriously; he wrote from ethical rather than scholarly motives. Yet he probably set hundreds of thousands of American boys and girls reading history. First they got the enthusiasm for the general subject, and later they could temper their appraisals of historical figures by an increase of knowledge.

In 1851-1854 he was issuing his "Life of Napoleon" in Harper's Magazine, which gave that periodical perhaps its first great success. When the book was published in 1855 it enjoyed a cyclone of popularity; he adored Napoleon and represented him not only as a great genius, but as a Moral Hero. Indiscriminating adoration. I remember reading that book when I was a small boy, and I believed every word of it.

Now appears a very entertaining book, called "Napoleon and His Marshals," written by that brilliant Scot, A. G. Macdonell, author of the diverting and instructive work, "England, Their England" (1933). I recommend this biography to all readers. It is dramatic in the extreme, while being written from the modern point of view.

What will surprise those who did not know it is the origin of these mighty marshals. A dictator always has this advantage: instead of appointing imbeciles to important offices as a reward for political services, he picks out the best men, knowing his own success depends on theirs. Thus these brilliant marshals had the following immediate ancestry (1804):

Berthier, aged 51, son of an engineer.
Murat, 37, son of innkeeper.
Moncey, 50, son of lawyer.
Jourdan, 52, son of physician.
Massena, 48, son of tanner, soap-maker.
Augereau, 47, son of working mason.
Bernadotte, 41, son of lawyer.
Soult, 35, son of lawyer.
Brune, 41, son of lawyer.
Lannes, 35, son of peasant farmer.
Mortier, 36, son of farmer.
Ney, 35, son of cooper.
Davout, 34, son of an officer.
Bessieres, 36, son of physician.

Later were added:
Victor, 43, son of soldier.
Macdonald, 44, son of soldier.
Marmont, 35, son of an officer.
Oudinot, 42, son of brewer.
Suchet, 41, son of silk-maker.
St. Cyr, son of tanner.
Poniatowski, 50, son of a prince.
Grouchy, 49, son of a marquis; and we know what the marquis' son did to rather than for Napoleon at Waterloo. Mr. Macdonell says the two ablest marshals in the whole list were Davout and Massena.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

"IF the theater," writes John Dos Passos in the preface to his "Three Plays" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50), "doesn't become a transformer for the deep, high tension currents of history, it's deader than cock-fighting."

There are times when I quite agree with that kind of doctrine, and in just the way Dos Passos means it—that the theater must take part in the intellectual life of its time, must expose the vein and muscle of social trends, in particular (to quote again) must help "in creating the new myth that has got to replace the imperialistic prosperity myth."

And then I look at Dos Passos' plays—which I presume are offered to save the stage from the emptiness of wing and spur-play—and I do an abrupt about-face. For it seems plain that where he is most earnest in these passionately proletarian plays, he turns out to be creakiest. And where he is richest and most successful appears to be in passages dubbed with the hoary old graces of story and drama. Which is absurdly simple but true. Class-literature must always face that Nemesis.

THEO. HALL.

* * * *

"The Garbage man" (originally called "The Moon Is a Gong") and "Airways, Inc." have both seen production, in 1925 and 1929, respectively. The first, tricked out with a musical comedy manner by Edward Massey, its first producer at the Harvard Dramatic Club, is a fantasia on death, love, money success, and the hardships of the unemployed. Death himself, as a family physician, a railroad workman, and a man in a top hat, comes on the scene, and certain wild choral extravagances (in "modern" movie technique) add further to the unreality.

The second named, on the other hand, is flatly realistic—listing the pended to each name a few words city life which touches the front porch and parlor of the Turners, and passes before them in the street. "Listing," of course, shows scope and not tone. Dos Passos remains ineradicably a poet.

Much the best is the last play, "Fortune Heights," to be produced this season. It presents with clarity and faithfulness a filling station on the edge of a real-estate development. We see the optimistic owner, his skeptical, but devoted wife, the young helper longing to get away, the two tin-can tourists and their niece who stays to take a job, the village bright boy as amateur detective, and a host of other live and solidly presented characters. Though there are social implications, Dos Passos appears here far less the orator than the playwright.

For it is the relation between Owen Hunter and his wife, and between wanderlusting Morry and the girl, which one grasps and feels most keenly. Just as in the preceding play, it is Martha's cry for the condemned Walter which soars out above (and yet underscores so deeply) the social arraignment. "What can I do," her last words are "now that he is gone and that he has left me full of scalding wants, what can I do with the lack of him inside me like a cold stone.

These are unforgettable plays, which weep, laugh, and ring like brass.

Random House sent me, a few days ago, the printed brief which their lawyers got up for the appeal of the "Ulysses" case to the Circuit Court. It's a pamphlet of some 80 pages, put together with so much legal logic that it is, of course, unanswerable.

But what amused me was that their candor went so far as to include some quoted critical opinions of dubious sales value. If I have a little fun in slyly picking out some fragments, don't think my respect is one whit lessened for the critics or the book itself. The following were naturally conspicuous because of the general adulation.

William Allen Neilson—"I am not a great admirer of 'Ulysses.'"

Lewis Gannett—"Nothing so distastefully honest has appeared before in legal print * * * Already it has acquired the corpse-like color of a classic."

Henry S. Canby—"I think the book has some very bad passages."

Louis Untermyer—"* * * grotesque and forbidding."

Paul Jordan Smith—"'Ulysses' can have no universal appeal; its reading is too formidable a task for that."

* * * *

But the lawyers themselves, Messrs. Ernst and Lindey, take the cake. In endeavoring to show that no idle mind would loaf through the book for prurient passages, they all but prove the book can't be read at all.

They quote two highly obscure paragraphs as samples of the difficulty, list 32 stumbling-block words such as "topiary" and "loodheramaun," and wind up by remarking: "If one opens 'Ulysses' at random almost anywhere, one will confront passages meaningless on the surface, and decipherable only after concentrated study * * * Its riches are so well hidden in grottoes of recondite learning * * * that the average seeker—blindly groping about in the surrounding maze—soon tires of the venture and turns back."

The new chairman of the A. A. A. A. is an enthusiastic amateur flyer, and maintains two planes for his personal use. He succeeds W. A. D'Arcy, of St. Louis.

Radio Waves and Ripples

IT WAS a good thing for Aunt Sadie that it rained Tuesday.

For some weeks now she has been making weather predictions with an error percentage of practically zero, depending entirely and quite sensibly upon the degree of static interference on her radio.

This, to Uncle Lemuel, who takes to new-fangled ideas slowly and whose rheumatism has made him the family barometer for years, was just so much stuff. So, in a fit of professional jealousy the other day, he poked around Aunt Sadie's radio and, with the assistance of Cousin John, discovered a loose connection.

This both of them immediately and loudly proclaimed as the cause of most if not all of the crackling noises upon which Aunt Sadie's predictions were based, and as promptly and boisterously left the house for an afternoon of golf.

When they returned an hour or so later dripping from head to foot it would have been our turn to be jubilant, had we not discovered John wearing our very best slacks. Uncle Lemuel our spiked shoes, and both of them carrying most of our golfing equipment.

WE judge Mrs. Ericson, of Vienna, Va., to be a very sound sort of person, first, because in responding by letter to WJSV's request for criticism she takes a few well aimed shots at a civilization which requires yearly be-kind-to-animals reminders, and, second, because she takes occasion to append the following concerning The Post's drama department:

"And finally, in the words of Winchell, may I toss an orchid to Nelson Bell, of The Post, for his dramatic reminiscences—and should you be able to find someone to do a Woman's Hour book review, what he does for the stage and screen, then indeed, the Woman's Hour would be perfect."

There is a postscript to Mrs. Ericson's letter, Nelson, should you feel particularly grateful:

"Should I be eligible for theater tickets, kindly send them for the Ambassador."

TO hear Arch McDonald's unhurried, matter-of-fact baseball broadcasting on WJSV, and to see him at work in the studio we never should have suspected his oratorical capacities unless we had been shown a clipping from one of the newspapers in Arch's hometown of Chattanooga, Tenn., where oratory is still recognized as one of the arts.

"A little six-year old girl, in speaking to Dr. Hart about his moving away, said: 'Dr. Hart, I don't see why you are going to Washington. They have President Roosevelt and Arch McDonald up there.'"

Maybe the little girl would feel better if Mr. Roosevelt would send Gen. Johnson to Chattanooga for the summer.

By temporarily damaging himself in a fall over a chair while dressing, Arthur Godfrey gave Engineer Clyde Hunt another turn at WJSV's Sun Dial yesterday morning.

We weren't up in time to hear him or any other breakfast broadcaster, but some of those who were told us that Clyde's characteristic drawling put them right back to sleep.

MARION CLAIR, of the Chicago Civic Opera Co., will be back with N. B. C. at the close of a concert series in the Middle West.

Speaking of dawn broadcasters, will some impartial observer who also doesn't care what happens at breakfast, please give us his version of Arthur Reilly's morning efforts?

Getting Personal.

Bill Adams, who lost his job when the White House complained of his too-realistic impersonations of President Roosevelt on March of Time, has found work helping Beatrice Fairfax patch up broken lives . . . There are a lot of actors who can't find any kind of a job . . . They say Singin' Sam's sartorial equipment has been toned down some since he made his first C. B. S. broadcast three years ago . . . He then wore white flannels, tan jacket, red suspenders, bright green necktie and a yellow shirt . . . With deep blue stripes . . . It was exactly eight years ago tomorrow that Tony Wons first faced a microphone . . . Rosa Ponselle keeps herself in shape (?) with daily bicycle rides around the terrace of her penthouse.

Insurance Leader Says America Is on the Pick-Up

Metropolitan Life Head Sees Continued Gain in Business.

A young man stepped out of an Horatio Alger book yesterday, fixed himself comfortably in a chair at the Mayflower Hotel and unhesitantly stated, in reply to a question, that America is on the pick-up.

When Frederick H. Ecker has things to say about depressions and recoveries his opinions are worth listening to, for he is the "depression president" of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and in the last few months has covered more than half the United States and a good part of Canada in a business conditions survey.

He was in Washington yesterday to confer with his company executives and agents in this area. Today he will lead a pep meeting in Baltimore.

The insurance business, a dependable barometer of the country's state of being, is doing excellently, said Ecker. Investments are in sound shape and there is every indication of continued improvement, according to this 66-year-old Phoenician (N. Y.), who entered the Metropolitan's service a half century ago as a $4-a-week office boy.

At 16 he was promoted to mail boy. From there he rose to bookkeeper, assistant real estate manager, manager, comptroller, treasurer, director, vice president and president, in that order. He attained the top rung in 1929, seven months before the crash.

Depressions, though, seem to have a happy effect upon Ecker. The one in 1893 gave him a fateful opportunity to prove himself. As assistant to the real estate manager, he was so successful in rehabilitating foreclosed apartment properties and disposing of them that they made him manager.

Under his leadership during the last five lean years the Metropolitan has made substantial progress, comparative figures show.

He directs an organization employing nearly 50,000 persons, who serve about 25,000,000 policyholders, but his golf scores are around much smaller figures. Ecker is president of Blind Brook Country Club and belongs to numerous golfing organizations.

On the professional side, he is a director of many banks and corporations, a church trustee and a member of almost innumerable civic and scientific bodies.

Thief Raids School's Food, Candy Supply

A thief who forced entrance to the Denison School early yesterday had a large and expansive appetite.

First, police were told, he drank 5½ pints of milk. Then he raided a candy counter and made away with sweets valued at upward of $7.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Dead as He Is, Blackie Can Still Visit

When Jay Bird got back to Blackie's house and told them what had happened over at Uncle Joe's, every blessed one of those Creek Folks nearly had a fit. They certainly did cut up Jack out in front of Blackie's house. Hee Haw didn't dare to bray right out, but just had to whistle several times. And it did seem like Billie Possum would grin himself to death. "Good old Hound Dog," he said, "and just to think how I used to hate him. And now it's ice cream and buttermilk again and big red apples and scuppernongs. Oh, oh, oh!" And Billie turned somersaults so fast that he looked like a big fuzzy muff rolling over on the grass.

"Now you folks have had enough foolishness," said Blackie, "so let's get down to business. Jocko, hitch Hee Haw back to the wagon, and Dr. Coon, you and Billie and grandpa get in the wagon, if you want to. I need to wiggle my legs a bit after so much riding."

But grandpa said he wanted to walk, too; and he skipped along on his hind legs, and waved his arms just like a boy that is going fishing. He said he was just itching to squeeze the squeel out of a good fat pig.

It was most midnight when they got to the little creek close to Uncle Joe's house. There they stopped and all got out, for they didn't want to drive the donkey and wagon up close enough to the house for Uncle Joe to see their tracks when he came back home. Blackie told Hee Haw to stay right there till they came back. Then they took all the bags and buckets and baskets and went up to the house.

Jocko took his gun along, for there was no use taking any chances of getting into trouble with a big ram sheep or billie goat. By the time they got to the house the moon was up, and it was so light they didn't need any lantern.

"Now don't get excited," said Blackie, "just take your time. Let every man go and get just what he wants. For my part, I want turkeys and honey."

"Milk and apples for me," said Billie Possum, as he grabbed a big bucket and a bag. Just here a big old gander raised up among the flock of geese at the barn and shouted, "Quack, quack, quack!"

"Pow" went Jocko's gun, and there was a dead gander. That started off the evening's entertainment, and then—and then—well, you will just have to wait till tomorrow to learn what else happened, for there is too much of it to tell tonight.

Culbertson on Bridge

Forcing Partner to Ruff.

Situations frequently arise at the bridge table where one member of the defending partnership is extremely anxious to force his partner to use an apparently worthless trump in order to promote the value of a trump combination in his own hand. Where this situation occurs it is the duty of the defending player who has the lead to make it just as easy as possible for his partner to get his message.

The method by which Mr. James M. Magner, of Boston, one of the stronger players in the metropolis of New England, achieved this result on the hand below is interesting.

South Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 3 ♡ A K 7 4 ◇ 10 9 3 2 ♣ 8 5
♠ 4 2 ♡ Q 6 5 3 2 ◇ K J 8 6 ♣ 3 2		Mr. Magner ♠ K 10 ♡ J 9 8 ◇ 7 4 ♣ A K Q J 10 4
	♠ A 9 8 7 6 5 ♡ 10 ◇ A Q 5 ♣ 9 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♡	3♣
3♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Inasmuch as North was not strong enough to make a Forcing Takeout it was better for him to bid hearts than to immediately give a single Raise in spades. The distribution of his hand did not warrant stronger bidding. Mr. Magner, with a six-card established suit, was justified in bidding three clubs, as even though doubled and if he failed to find a trick in his partner's hand, he could not lose more than 300 points. If the loss was that heavy, then the probabilities were that the opponents certainly had a game. South felt his six-card suit in spades warranted a Rebid and North contracted for game.

West opened the club 3 in response to his partner's bid. Mr. Magner won with the Ten and returned another high club. To the third trick, however, he led the club 4, knowing that his partner had no more clubs, but wishing to make it crystal clear to him that he desired him to ruff so that Mr. Magner might thus establish a trump trick for himself. South played the club 9, and West correctly decoded his partner's message. He ruffed with the 4, Dummy over-ruffed with the Knave, and thus Mr. Magner's seemingly worthless combination of trumps produced a trick. Later South was also compelled to lose a diamond trick, which defeated the contract by one trick.

Pin Money Theory of Working Wives Vigorously Protested by Two Authorities

Boo Housework Evasion Idea; Say Necessity Driving Factor

Industrial Women Aren't Wage Earners to Express Themselves; Both Housekeepers and Employes—They Work Continually Because They Must.

Employed homemakers are divided into two general classes. One group is engaged in gainful occupation for self-expression. An infinitely larger class works to supplement or provide the family income. Problems of the first group, consisting largely of professional women, are more widely known than those confronting married wage earners in mill, laundry, or restaurant. This article, dealing with women in industry, is the fourth in a series on wage-earning homemakers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHY DO most married women work?

"For pin money. To buy trinkets and trifles they could easily do without," retorted their critics.

"To get out of doing housework," others said.

Do these replies answer the question?

"They do not!" insists Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor. "Most married women work because they have to.

"Nothing could be more ridiculous than the idea most women work to get out of keeping house. The average woman in industry has two jobs. She is both housekeeper and employe. She cooks breakfast for her family before she goes to work. She spends eight hours a day laboring for pay, and then she comes home to prepare dinner, do her washing, mending or anything else that needs to be done.

"In the face of this it is surprising the pin-money theory still persists. From surveys we have discovered the married woman in industry works either to earn a living or to support dependents.

Criticism Has Changed.

"The husband may not have a job, or he may earn a very small wage. There may be illness in the family, or both parents may be striving to educate their children. Many families, too, are buying homes, or paying debts."

Miss Anderson further pointed out that during the depression of 1921 women in general were criticized for taking jobs from men, while today the criticism is leveled exclusively at married women.

"All this discussion about the married woman's place being in the home is a type of propaganda to rob her of the chance to work for wages," continued Miss Anderson. "There was, of course, a time when they did stay in the home, but they played an important industrial role even then because most products were made under the home roof. Women spun flax, wool, cotton, and made garments for the family. They canned fruit, dried vegetables and made soap and candles. Naturally, then, when these industries went into the factory, women followed.

"After the industrial revolution, women were not confined to the transplanted industries but entered any avenues of employment that opened up. So far, they have proved themselves capable of doing almost every type of work that men do."

Miss Anderson maintained in view of this the merit system should be the only basis of choosing employes.

Wouldn't Solve Unemployment.

Wholesale dismissal of married women would not prove a remedy for unemployment, holds Miss Elizabeth Christman, secretary of the Woman's Trade Union League.

"Replacing married women—even if it were done in every industry—would not be a satisfactory solution for unemployment," she averred. "The problem can be more effectively solved by providing shorter working hours and by increasing the consumer's purchasing power.

"Even if dismissals are considered, why should a married woman be replaced more quickly than the single man who has no dependents, or the unmarried woman who is living at home? Ability of the worker, not marital status, is the only sensible way to determining preference in retaining employes."

Miss Christman called attention to the fact women will have to work for pay so long as the maximum average annual wage for the head of the fmily is $1,350. She will be forced to help support the family when the husband is unemployed, to help meet payments on a home, and to contribute to the support of dependents outside the immediate family.

Should Be Allowed.

"So long as women have as many demands on them as men, they will seek work," she asserted. "And so long as dependents look to them for support, they should certainly be allowed the privilege of working. There is, in fact, no good reason why married industrial employes should be penalized when holding a job is not a matter of pride but an economic necessity.

"While a woman in industry is one of millions," she said, "comparatively helpless in mass competition, there have been fewer women in factories and mills discharged than in other concerns hiring women workers. But there remains, unfortunately, discrimination in the matter of wages. I believe, however, we are moving toward the time when men will cease to draw higher wages than women who do the same amount and the same quality of work."

This, then, is the position of the married woman in industry. But what of the self-employed professional woman who is faced with skepticism because she is a woman? What of the highly trained married woman who works in order to express herself or to achieve economic independence?

(Read in tomorrow's Post about the professional women earners.)

"SO LONG AS MARRIED WOMEN have as many demands on them as men, they should not be penalized in the matter of holding jobs," says Miss Elizabeth Christman, secretary of the Woman's Trade Union League.

MARRIED WOMEN IN INDUSTRY work to earn a living or to support dependents—not for pin-money. So believes Miss Mary Anderson, above, director of the Woman's Bureau, Department of Labor.

Etiquette Books on Wane; Trend Toward Agriculture

People Use Libraries as Vocational Guidance Bureaus; One Wanted to Learn Boat Building to Sail Away From It All.

ETIQUETTE books are on the back shelves in public libraries today. Readers are more interested in chicken raising than tea-cup balancing.

That is according to Miss Jennie M. Flexner, readers' adviser in the New York Public Library. Miss Flexner is at the Shoreham attending the conference on adult education.

"People are reading books for their essential value," Miss Flexner said yesterday. "They are using them as weapons in their fight to preserve morale, as a means of avoiding inertia, and for finding original ideas they can commercialize."

Many persons today look on the library as a combined educational institution and vocational guidance bureau, Miss Flexner explained.

"They come to us from all walks of life, at all ages, seeking aid in their problems," she said. "We try to outline reading courses in all subjects except those requiring laboratory work.

The Oversold Problem.

"Often men and women who have oversold themselves on a job come to us. In other words, they have pretended to know something they don't, and they want to read enough in a day or two to get by. One of these was a young dancer who took a position teaching dancing in a kindergarten, and wanted to learn pedagogical terms before she began work. Another man who had been in advertising took a job in a paper plant and wanted to learn the chemistry of his work."

Many persons come to readers' advisers for help in selecting a life work, Miss Flexner says.

"We usually send these to the vocational guidance bureaus to get a line on what they can do, and then we give them a reading course. Recently a young school teacher whose school had closed came to us and wanted to know where she could best use her ability and training. We helped her find an interest."

Books on Farming.

The back-to-the-farm movement has greatly increased the circulation of books on agriculture, according to Miss Flexner.

"Men come in who have never lived on a farm and want to read a book or two that will teach them the essentials of fertilization, horticulture and marketing," she said.

"Librarians are besieged by persons who want books on the technique of writing. Every one, from tramps and sailors to world-famous travelers, wants to make a fortune writing down his experiences.

"But our most interesting patron was a man who wanted a book on boat building because he was disgusted with life and wanted to sail away from it all."

War, Fascism To Be Censored At World Meet

International Conference of Women to Mobilize Against Them.

PARIS, May 23 (AP).—A world conference of women meeting with the avowed intention of mobilizing feminine forces against war and fascism will be held here July 28, 29 and 30.

"Fascist dictatorships particularly threaten women, who under the regime are morally debased, deprived of their dearly acquired rights, driven from their posts and in consequence, deprived of their livelihood and independence," declares the initiative committee of the World Conference of Women, an organization with an international membership founded last February.

"In consideration of this and of the growing gravity of the world political and economic situation, numerous eminent personalities of different countries are convinced of the necesstiy of organizing on a large basis, a mobilization of all feminine forces against war, fascism and all conditions lowering the material and moral plane of women's lives."

Prominent leaders of the committee launching the battle against fascism are Elsie Tudor, American feminist; John Dewey, American philosopher, Margerita Nelken, deputy to the Spanish Cortes; Andre Viollis, French writer; Henriette Holst, Dutch poet; Elin Wagner, Swedish journalist, and Lady Marley and the Countess of Warwick of Great Britain.

Women of countries now under fascist regimes also are included in the committee and are expected to attend the conference, according to Paris headquarters, which states that for "reasons of prudence" their names can not be given.

Fifteen delegates from the United States and representatives from China and Germany are expected to attend the conference.

It's aim is a general "get together" session wherein the present-day problems may be discussed. Delegates will include housewives, working women and peasants, as well as representative professional women.

A WRITER TO BECOME successful must have direct experience with life, says Dorothy Canfield Fisher, above, author of some 25 books and numerous articles. While in Washington Mrs. Fisher was a guest at the White House.

Writer Doesn't Know What Started Career

Dorothy Canfield Ponders, Then Offers "All at Once I Began to Write"—Then Author of 25 or So Books Couldn't Stop.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

MOST successful writers will admit under pressure that their first brain children were born when the writers themselves were scarcely out of rompers. Not so Dorothy Canfield Fisher. Author of some 25 books, mostly fiction, Mrs. Fisher declared yesterday morning at the Shoreham that she was a "mature person" before she even considered writing.

She had studied romance languages in this country and in France with the intention of becoming a college professor; had completed the courses before she wrote her first line.

Mrs. Fisher, small, wiry, gray-haired, claimed she has no idea what turned her interests from teaching to writing.

"All at once I began to write. I don't know why." The author of "The Deepening Stream," "The Bent Twig" and other widely-read novels pondered this state of affairs a moment. Then she continued, "No, I really haven't the slightest idea why I began writing. But once I had begun I found I couldn't stop." A smile curved her rather wide mouth.

Mrs. Fisher's recipe for writing success is: gain direct experience of life and cultivate the powers of expression.

Advises Revision.

"One is just as important as the other. But it's impossible to put all would-be writers in a heap and give them the same advice. Each one should be dealt with in a different way. The nearest I can come to a generality is to say most embryo writers send in unfinished work. They should do more revising. The time comes, however, when a story has been worked over and over enough, although it may be little improved from the first rough draft. When that time comes, the writer should put the story aside, should begin something else."

The ability to recognize when the possibilities of revision have been exhausted is one of the most valuable assets a writer can have, believes Mrs. Fisher.

She sets aside so many hours each day for her writing when she is at work on a book.

"I've found it best to work from 8 in the morning until 12:30. That leaves me the afternoon for other interests."

Here is one author who has never had her mail-box cluttered up with rejection slips. A magazine bought her first story and other magazines started right in buying subsequent ones.

"I'm afraid I didn't take my literary efforts very seriously and I was amazed when anyone else did," said Mrs. Fisher.

But after a whole flock of short stories had been published the potential professor of romance languages turned to the serious business of writing books, including several volumes on child-training.

Dorothy Canfield Fisher has written every one of her books in longhand. Her method is to write down the thoughts just as quickly as they come.

"Get Them on Paper."

"The idea is to get them down on paper. There is plenty of time afterward for revision," she explained. "Before a sculptor can begin work he must have his clay. Well, a writer's first draft is his clay. After he has that on the desk before him he can work with it and mold it into the shape he wants."

And of other interests there is no lack in the life of Dorothy Canfield Fisher. Mother of a son and daughter, president of the American Association for Adult Education, board member of the Book-of-the-Month Club, and frequently a judge in contests for choosing prize novels, her days are crammed with activity.

Recently she dashed from her home in Vermont to Chicago to greet her first grandchild, a girl born to her daughter. Then Mrs. Fisher flew to Washington to attend the annual meeting of the American Association for Adult Education, now in session at the Shoreham. Last night she was a guest at the White House. Today she flew back to Chicago to spend a few days with her new granddaughter. Soon she will return to Vermont so she will be home in time to welcome her son when he returns from Swarthmore College, where he is studying medicine.

"And some day I suppose I'll settle down to writing another book," said Mrs. Fisher as she gathered up notebooks and prepared to attend a session of the American Association for Adult Education.

Keeping Posted

"Atmosphere" Lenders.

WHEN children "perform," there is never any predicting what will happen. Sometimes the funniest things are the unplanned ones.

Sunday night, when the Russian dancer, Theodore Bekefi, and his young American assistants, Maurice Deleporte and Billy Lytell, presented the studio's first "spring program," one of the most amusing incidents in the entire show was the totally unconscious "acting" of small Zelah Millard, dressed in Indian costume, perched throughout the doll shop ballet in a box of "Display Dolls."

• • • •

Phyllis Greenberg, also in this huge box, was almost as funny. She was dressed as a Dutch doll.

• • • •

There they stood as obedient as 7-year-olds could be expected to be, but their little hands would wave in time and their earnest small faces were mirrors for varied emotions of intense interest or concern for the dancers.

Just Another Wood.

"WHAT in the world is harewood?" inquired a woman staring in bewilderment at a bedroom setting tricky enough to inspire a dozen Avery Hopwoods.

The guide in charge of the modernistic suites being shown at the Willard Hotel said she "didn't know; it just seemed to be a new kind of wood."

• • • •

Harry S. Dulin, of Dulin & Martin's, does know and says harewood is the name of a tree that has grown in South America and Africa lo! these many years.

• • • •

"The gray of this wood does fit excellently into the color scheme of modernistic furniture, with blue, green or black enamel," said Mr. Dulin. "At present, harewood is used largely as a veneer for other woods, but it probably won't be long before a harewood chest or diningroom set will be as popular as mahogany or walnut are today."

Sisterly Pride.

TWO attractive women, obviously strangers to the beautiful marble church that is St. Matthew's on Rhode Island avenue, were there on a lovely Sunday morning showing marked concentration on the sermon preached by Monseigneur Buckley.

• • • •

After service a regular member of the congregation greeted the two strangers hospitably and said:

"Did you enjoy the sermon?"

• • • •

"Yes, indeed," said one, "I think Monseigneur Buckley preached a very good sermon."

"So do I," said the other stranger. "We've been trying to hear him for years. This is the first time we've managed it. You see, he's our brother!"

Elderly Women Invade Capital; Live in Hotels

Enjoy Parades, Band Concerts and, Most of All, the Politics.

MANAGERS of Washington hotels with an eye to business are catering as never before to the tastes and comforts of elderly women. For Washington has become the emigration goal of women who have reared their families and finished their active work in the world.

In the lobby of a hotel where silver hair (permanently waved) and soft voices predominated an investigator sought the secret of Washington's attraction to these women.

"Washington is such a lovely city. It's such a restful place," was the chief explanation.

The elderly women like the trees and museums here, the concerts and parades, and above all, the politics. They have tickets to the Senate and they watch their morning papers to see what is up for discussion. They go out for anything important. They love to wander about the Congressional Library.

They make frequent excursions to Mount Vernon, Arlington and other outlying districts, not as hasty sightseers, but as one woman put it, to "absorb." They keep up with the Marine Band schedule as well as that of the Army and Navy bands. On rare and much talked of occasions they visit the White House.

They Have a Nostalgia.

One woman said she liked to live in Washington because the streets were well lighted at night and she didn't like to go to bed early. She can stay out all hours and feel safe.

After their sightseeing activities the elderly women rest in the lounges of their hotels. It is at such moments wistful memories of bygone days come to the surface.

"Young people are never young any more . . . not young as we were young," comments an old lady. "It meant something to be in love when I was a girl," said another as she put down her paper detailing the fourth divorce of a popular movie actress.

"All my young relatives are bored," confided another. "They'd die if they had to stay at home. They don't really have to work but do it just to be out of home. It was all different in my time. We never thought of being bored at home. We read good books. Nowadays I suppose nobody reads; it's out of fashion."

These women of another generation are incurably romantic. The years have not dulled their loves that bloomed "when love meant something" and lasted until death and beyond. Many are widows, some of a few years, some longer. Which of them will not tell you how the Russian nobleman fell in love with "that woman over there in black, the first time he ever laid eyes on her?" And they will tell you "it was a great love and a happy marriage till the Russian was killed in the revolution."

Aren't Critical.

"You wouldn't think that woman over there knitting a sweater would have defied her family and gone off with a man to Oklahoma in a covered wagon! That was a successful marriage," the women tell you proudly.

In spite of their wistful memories the elderly women are not critical. They are the last to say the world is going to the dogs. They are the first to approve all modern conveniences; they love the radio. They reside in Washington hotels through winter and summer. When it is fair weather they enjoy being out. In bad weather they delight in the companionship of sister souls in the living rooms of their hotels.

Poor exchange rates brought most of them back, and the charm of Washington brought many of them here.

Two Bath Oils Newest Things In Beauty Line

Verdant Pine and Flowers of Rain Will Soften, Scent Water.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A STYLIST in beauty announces the advent of new twins. They are her newest preparations, two bath oils.

To find names to suit them she held a National contest. Hundreds and hundreds of suggestions were submitted and carefully combed by a committee of judges. Finally two were selected. One, Verdant Pine, the other, Flowers of Rain.

Verdant Pine is for daytime use. Its woodsy fragrance is a marvelous pick-up. It is as gloriously stimulating as a champagne bath should be.

Fowers of Rain is ideal for evening. It scents the bath and body with a perfume that lingers for hours.

The twins soften water, scent it, and turn the bath into a luxury. Neither of them rings the tub in the disagreeable manner of some oils.

Incidentally the gentlemen have a look-in on this as the pine fragrance was designed with an eye toward masculine appeal.

Lower the Drink Bill.

The highball bill wouldn't be half as high if it wasn't for the wasteful expenditure that goes into leftover carbonated beverages. When one bottle doesn't quite go around and a dent is made in another the remaining portion soon loses its life and sparkle. And the figures are written in red.

Advocates of spend a little and save a lot are promoting a push-button rubber stopper that keeps sparkling beverages airtight and lengthens their life by days and weeks.

• • • •

Shades of School Days.

Auld lang syne is here again, this time with middy blouses. Remember the days of plaits, Buster Brown collars, shirtwaists, and middies? Some of the models at a local shop will surely carry you back.

They have all the old timey charm of their predecessors, and looked at from the angle of modern nautical styles they're the embodiment of up-to-date sportiness.

Worn with a white or blue sport skirt, a jaunty little beret, they would give their wearer no end of dash. Many are being sold to go with beach slacks. Because they're reasonably priced and exceedingly smart, they are catching on rapidly.

To Grace Beaches.

The fashion spotlight recently centered on the races disclosed a majority of tailored suits, some printed frocks and square-crowned sailors by the dozens.

It is turning toward the beaches now. One of the smart things it reveals is a beach set, including rubber cape, cap and bag, all matching.

There are numbers of these in a local shop. One of the smartest is a bright green and white combination. The cape is green on one side, with a white lining. The sets come in a variety of colors and are priced low.

• • • •

For Promenaders.

New sun parasols have a happy advantage over those of former years. Those featured in a downtown department store are not only proof against the burning rays of the sun, but the drenching showers, too.

Women in this part of the country can appreciate the advantage of this arrangement. Frequently they go for a promenade, the sky all blue and the sun beaming forth. Suddenly clouds blow up and rain descends precipitately.

The best thing about them, outside their versatility, is their variety of patterns. There are plaids, polka dots, prints and stripes in all colors. The price is a real selling point.

• • • •

To Match the Panties.

The number of shoppers who called about the bridal mesh panties mentioned in this column several days ago will be interested to hear there are bridal mesh vestees to match.

Dresses which require no slips should be taken advantage of to the extent of dressing as coolly as possible under them. The mesh panties plus the vests are a fine summer refrigeration scheme. They may be folded into practically nothing, to suit them to traveling purposes, and may be rinsed and dried in a few minutes.

• • • •

Polishing Base.

Shoe boxes, with nonscratchable tops are selling now for $1.29. They are designed to stand close to the bathroom wall and serve as a home polishing and brushing base. The top lifts to disclose a large inside space for buffer, polish and cleaner. Incidentally purchasers of these boxes are presented with all three to begin with.

They come in a sufficient number of colors to make it easy to match the bathroom color scheme.

Culinary Explorer Goes Into Syria To Find Exotic and Delicious Foods

Fermented Milk, Lamb Are the Staples of the Country.

Bedouins and sheiks, Armenians and Turks, Syrians and white-robed Arabs—what do they eat?

Only from the lips of a native can we get this knowledge. So today, in the third of a series of articles on foreign foods and flavors, we listen to a black-eyed Syrian restaurateur tell of the interesting and almost alarming differences between the food of his country and ours.

By Susan Mills.

A SYRIAN woman bends over a shallow marble basin. In the basin is a lamb steak from which all fat, veins and tendons have been removed. She pounds the meat with a heavy wooden mallet until it is soft and like a smooth gum.

She lays the meat aside, fills the basin with cracked wheat and pounds tirelessly. The process takes hours. When the wheat is soft, and the grains well blended, she adds the meat and pounds the two together for another hour or two.

She is making kippe, the native dish.

A deep-eyed Syrian proprietor of a New York restaurant dips a spoon into a dish containing fermented milk and meat balls. It is his luncheon.

"My mother used to make kippe that way," he says, "It was no wonder women spent all their time cooking. The preparation of the foods takes so long. We serve kippe here, but we use a fine food chopper to grind the meat. The meat and wheat mixture is sometimes served raw with olive oil and chopped onion, or we bake it in a large pan and serve it cut in oblong sections."

She Tries Some.

"You will try some?" He tells the cook to fill a plate with a variety of Syrian foods. "Some baked kippe, some lambs' intestines stuffed with meat and rice, some fava beans, some vegetables. Yes, and a dish of fermented milk."

You look at your heaped plate. Lamb's intestines? You taste them and find them delicious. The kippe? Good. You eat each mouthful with a spoonful of fermented milk. Vegetables? All cooked with pieces of lamb, like a stew.

"Syria is the land of shepherds. The climate does not permit the raising of good beef. We use lamb exclusively because it lends itself to our cooking. It can be boiled and still be tender, roasted, and loose no flavor.

"We cook all vegetables with lamb. In that way each dish is complete from the standpoint of nutrition. We do not like vegetables cooked alone in water. I, myself, find American vegetables tasteless. I have to season them with tomato sauce or something before I can eat them.

The Invaluable Lamb.

"Our food is not heavy." You wonder at that, and look at your heaping plate.

"Always we eat fermented milk. It aids the digestion.

"How do you like the intestines? We stuff tripe the same way. We use all of a lamb in our cooking, the feet, head, shoulders, intestines. It is a very valuable animal."

At his order a German waitress who "speaks very good Syrian" brings a little copper pot with a long black handle. It contains a demi-tasse of coffee.

"Turkish coffee? It is called that, but it is really Arabian. It is made with pulverized coffee and a little sugar. However our food and that of the Turks, Armenians and Arabs are somewhat related.

"This," he indicates a little sweet pastry the waitress has brought, "is made of shredded wheat." He smiled. "No, not American shredded wheat. It is made of a fine flour made into a paste and spun very thin. The thread of paste is laid out in a circle—round and round—until it looks like a skein of yarn. We stuff it with pistachio nuts and sweet flavoring, bake and cut in strips like this. You'll never taste pastry better than ours.

"We use nuts in flavoring, very often pine nuts, crushed and mixed with mayonnaise—that kippe was stuffed with pine nuts. Walnuts go into a spinach pie, along with concentrated pomegranate juice, which we use much the way you use tomato catsup.

"We use a great deal of olive oil and oil made from the sesame seed.

A Syrian Recipe.

"If the American housewife wants to try a Syrian recipe here is one: Lamb stew with dill sauce. Dill, you know is a herb used in making dill pickles.

"First you make the stew by boiling lamb with celery, carrots and onions. The sauce is simply a brown sauce to which you add chopped dill which has been soaked in vinegar for several weeks. Add a little of the vinegar and sugar for flavoring and serve over the stew."

You have sipped your Turkish coffee by this time, so you thank the proprietor for his hospitality. He nods, but does not smile. He is very dignified.

You look over your shoulder as you leave. Fifteen or sixteen Syrian men are grouped around a large table playing craps. The air is full of strange language, made lucid by sharply inserted exclamations of "Okay!" "Hot dog!" and "Oh, yeah?"

Thank you. Yes, we'd like to come again.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Erysipelas Then and Now.

Erysipelas in adults is not a very serious disease so far as concerns tendency toward a fatal issue. Nor is it an important problem in preventive medicine. It was once a ferocious monster, but it has lost its tail feathers and its wings have been clipped. Before the days of Lister it was the big bad wolf of surgeons and lying-in hospitals, if we may be permitted to yield to pressure for the use of up-to-the-minute figures of speech. It has caused well built hospitals to be abandoned and others to be burned.

Even today patients with erysipelas appear to be very sick, but almost all of the adults who have it recover without after-effects. Health departments have great difficulty convincing people that it is a contagious disease and should be reported as such, but they occasionally have to deal with a small epidemic of it.

An adult who has it has a 16-to-1 chance of recovering from it. Recovery is to be expected even when it is located on the face and there are symptoms showing the brain is feeling its effect. And another great advance is the abandonment of ichthyol in treatment. To be smeared with that offensive fish oil preparation was not much better than fading out.

However, erysipelas remains a very grave disease when it appears among infants. When it attacks babies under one month of age the death rate under the older treatments was 80 to 90 per cent. In babies between one and six months of age it was slightly over 50 per cent, and in the last half of the first year of life it was slightly less than this figure. On this statement erysipelas in babies is a most serious disease. It has twice the mortality rate of the bad forms of pneumonia in adults. As children emerge from babyhood and progress toward maturity erysipelas becomes less serious with each year of life.

Treatment of the disease becomes progressively better. The old treatment consisted in the free use of whisky. That treatment was abandoned several years ago. Another early treatment consisted of large doses of tincture of muriate of iron. Iron is a good tonic with which to follow up erysipelas—a contribution to the treatment of convalescence after erysipelas—but patients very acutely sick with the disease are not now taxed with the remedy.

Then came the use of ichthyol and then the use of more pleasing local applications. The next stage was the use of serums and antitoxins. This group is still in use. In fact, it is the vogue. Probably the most efficient member of the group is blood serum taken from a person convalescent from erysipelas.

The latest step appears to be a still further improvement. It is ultraviolet light. This appears to be the most effective as well as the most pleasant and safest of all treatments.

Drs. Nightingale and Starr report that it is especially useful in treating erysipelas in babies. Given early, it reduces the period of acute symptoms, including fever, from about six and one-half days to about four and one-half. It cuts the death rate in just about half. And it has no drawbacks.

False Angina.

G. M. D. writes:

1. What is false angina?
2. Causes?
3. Symptoms?
4. Cure?

Reply.

1. This term is loosely applied to a variety of pains in the heart region of the chest.

2. Among other causes of such pains are rheumatism of the chest muscles, neuralgia of the nerves of the chest wall, pleurisy, and perhaps fear and other emotions.

3. Pain is the only constant symptom.

4. Since this symptom may be present in different disorders there is more than one treatment. As a rule the disorder is mild and nature unaided works a cure.

The TALKING SPARROW MURDERS

By Darwin Teilhet

The Story So Far.

"A sparrow down there spoke to me. It said distinctly, 'Help! I'm caught!'" With these words Kohlman, the big industrialist, fell dead at Tatson's feet on a Heidelberg street. Tatson was an American engineer, in a hurry to get home to a job which wouldn't wait. Of course, Kresch, chief of police, didn't believe his story; held him as a material witness; wouldn't let him leave Heidelberg. Then a man sneaked into Tatson's room and tried to shoot him. Tatson identified this man later as Taubek, the Nazi commander, scheduled to deliver the oration at Kohlmann's funeral. Tatson determined to attend the funeral and make sure. Passing through a park on the way, he met Spalger, his assistant plant manager, drunk and confessing his love for a girl who sometimes came to the park restaurant. She was, Spalger said, the mistress of Geigen, to whom the plant was being sold. When she drove by a short while later, Tatson had to rescue her from the drunken Spalger. Then he drove away with her in her car to an inn outside of town. The innkeeper showed them to an upstairs dining room.

Now let Tatson himself go on with the story:

Taxicab Was Puzzle.

I SAID, "Suppose I go out and put that Mercedes of yours around in back? You'll have time to finish powdering your nose and if any of our acquaintances in the taxicab happen by they won't be shocked by the sight of a green Mercedes."

"Leave me to my nose," she said, undisturbed, "and try to remember to bring the keys back with you."

In three minutes the green Mercedes was rusticating inside the garage. I walked back to the inn, to Geigen's mistress, to express it exactly as the thought came into my head.

She was holding her coat in her arms when I entered.

She laid her cheek against her hand. "A tiny glass of port might prevent the afternoon from being completely ruined."

The innkeeper teetered up and down. "You come with me, gracious Frau and Herr. Upstairs will be more comfortable. From the windows there you can overlook the Neckar River. Up here, please."

He introduced us into a small room. At the left a large window opened upon green, growing fields with the Neckar in the distance.

Our host moved up one of the big wooden chairs, stuck his finger against his nose, and then pushed the table to the divan, saying, "It will be more comfortable if the Frau will sit here. And my Herr"—he motioned to the domestic to place the chair on the side of the table next to the divan—"can sit here and you will both have the incomparable view."

"This is charming," she said and we obeyed him. We ordered a bottle of port and she insisted on cakes, if he had any, and he assured her that he did. The domestic returned with flowers for the center of the table, tiny ice cakes and a dusty bottle of port. The innkeeper bowed and smiled, "Is it all, my Herr?"

"Excellent."

The innkeeper looked around. "The sun strikes through the window, ja? I shall fix it." He drew the draperies. "That is better." He leaned over my shoulder. "You will call if you wish anything, my Herr?" I told him I would and he went out.

"He seems obliging enough," she said. "The cakes are good. Have one?"

It was quiet. I finished my part. I filled my glass again. She drank slowly.

"This has been a queer day," she commented, leaning back against the cushions. "What were you doing in the park?"

I offered her a cigarette. "No reason for being there at all."

"You're American, aren't you?"

"If they weren't shooting at you, Fraulein, why has your Mercedes bulletproof glass?"

"Did you know Herr Spalger intimately?" She added quickly, "One of the waiters mentioned his name."

"If there were three men," I said, "and one walked two miles a day for five days, and one walked four miles a day for six days and the——"

The cigarette danced between her lips. "I know that one. The third one's child was named Hans!"

Innkeeper Whispered.

"Excuse me," the innkeeper apologized, knocking and entering all at once. He bent down over my shoulder and squeezed out a breathy whisper. "I have now things to do downstairs. For an hour. Two hours. There is no one up here."

He looked at the girl and at me. "If you wish service you will have to please step down the hall to the stairs. It is very quiet back here and when we are downstairs we cannot hear."

He put his hand on the door and then as an afterthought, "We are all going downstairs."

She watched him close the door softly after him. "I'm afraid our host has a very immortal mind."

"Undoubtedly because of the people who come here."

"Then he'll be disappointed in us." She crushed her cigarette in a saucer.

"Sad, isn't it?"

"And he has such a kind, trusting face."

"I wouldn't say his face is exactly trustworthy."

"You should have seen him look at you when he went out. The fact he is going to stay downstairs will cost you at least two marks in tips."

"I feel as if I were somehow letting him down after all the care he's taken. There you are, sitting alone so demurely on that huge divan while I——"

Girl Was Attractive.

She squinted through her glass, drained it and leaned over and placed it on the table. "Not demurely. It's too comfortable for demureness. No more port. I've had enough, thanks."

"Is it really comfortable?"

"The port?"

"Hardly. You know what I mean." I indicated the divan where she was sitting.

"Well, why not try it here, then?"

I stood up. She smiled lazily at me, half reclining against the red fabric cushions, her dark tangled hair against the red, and flaring outward like a Russian headdress. Her head was tilted back, with the smooth curve of the throat showing to the neck of the sweater. The sweater was so cunningly fashioned, so snug and molded, that there wasn't much obscuring of any of the curves below the neck of the sweater, either.

"You don't believe it would be giving in too much to the designs of our host if I did?"

"That depends." She pointed to the other end of the divan. "Down there would hardly be giving in at all."

"I'd rather give in a little more." I sat down beside her.

"I hope not too much? We shouldn't crumble before him."

"Can you hear the sound of crumbling?"

Two Houses Left.

She leaned back against my arm and looked at her watch. "It's nearly 5 o'clock. I have to be back in Mannheim by 7."

"Two hours"—

"And you didn't want to waste the afternoon, did you? Poor man."

"Not asking some one questions which she won't answer."

"Why ask them, then?"

"You'd care if I didn't?"

The long narrow eyes filled with changing light and darkness and held my own and it was as if we were seeing each other standing alone for a moment together, and then the feeling passed as her head turned against my arm. "Perhaps," she said. "How should I know?"

It was after 7 when the innkeeper at my summons appeared smirking and scraping with the bill. I paid him and she went out to drive the Mercedes around to the front.

"Everything was all right, I hope? The room was all right?" the innkeeper asked.

I left him with the money in his hand. We drove directly to Mannheim. Every now and then I looked to see if we were being followed, but there was no need to take this precaution. It started to rain as we entered the outskirts of the city. Our headlights glistened against the black macadam. Several times I tried to talk to her, but she drove on silently, looking straight ahead, calmly, coolly, ignoring me entirely.

She Knew His Name.

She stopped two squares from the station. "Your train leaves for Heidelberg in ten minutes. Goodby."

"How do you know I live in Heidelberg?"

"If two men walked three miles in four days and"—

She let me take her hand. "You won't tell me anything?"

She shook her head.

"Not even your name?"

"Not even my name"—she hesitated, then added,—"Herr Tatson."

"Herr—what!"

I imagined I could see her mouth curve in the gloom of the interior. "You must go now," she said quickly, "I am late."

"How did you know my name?"

I think she was smiling as she drove away without replying. I watched the Mercedes go off into the darkness. I didn't even have the wit left to take down her license number, and now she was gone, I thought I'd never see her again.

I was destined to think wrong on a number of things. . . .

The train reached Heidelberg a little after nine in the evening. I was tired. I planned to take a hot bath and go to bed at once. I walked up the steps of the pension, raised the knocker just as the door opened and a mushy voice said, "Herr Tat-zohn?"

Officer Was Waiting.

I stepped inside. There was a big Schutzmann leaning against the hall table. The fat officer who had addressed me closed the door and said, "Will you please sit down, Herr Tatzohn? We have been waiting for you."

He swallowed and again requested, "Sit down, please."

I remained standing. The big Schutzmann wandered over toward us. I sat down. "What do you want?"

Kresch blew his nose and stuffed the handkerchief in his breast pocket. "Where were you today?"

The big Schutzmann took a quill toothpick from the marble bowl with a picture of the Vatican painted on the side and scratched his nose.

"Do you have to ask me these questions tonight? I demanded wearily. "I'm tired, I want to get some sleep. I've told you everything I know."

"If you do not answer my questions, Herr Tat-zohn, you will have to please come to the Polizeiamt under arrest." The tiny pig's eyes blinked and he rubbed his stomach, holding one hand over the other.

"You're a terrible nuisance, Herr Kresch."

"Ja," he smiled pleasantly. "Now you will answer the question please, without trouble. And after the questions, perhaps, you will let me show you another letter my cousin writes me? It has many American words that I do not know. That is no trouble either, Herr Tat-zohn?"

More Questions Asked.

I crossed my legs. "You make your questions short and I'll look at your letter."

"I will make them short. Now—" he looked at his notebook "—where did you go in Mannheim, please?"

"To Hublemeyers store, first. I found out"—

"If you please, Herr Tat-zohn. I have questions which are important."

"I found out who left the Luger in my room if you are interested. It was Taubek! And then I saw him in the park. I saw him and recognized him!"

Kresch exchanged glances with the big Schutzmann. "If you will now please answer only my questions"—

"But I know it was Taubek. You're not afraid to arrest him just because he's a Nazi?"

"Please, Herr Tat-zohn," he explained patiently. "Herr Taubek—he could have no interest in your room. Now . . . after you left Hulemeyers, please?"

I stared at him.

More and more the truth was becoming apparent. Kresch was faced by a situation which had enlarged beyond his powers. He was plodding along, going dutifully through the motions of investigating Kohlmann's death.

Testimony Given.

It didn't make any difference to Kresch if I had to leave Heidelberg in ten days or lose the new job.

"Well?" Kresch asked.

"After Hublemeyers?" I knew it wouldn't help to lose my temper. "I went to the Friedrichspark."

"Ah-zo!" He made a note in his book. "And what time, please?"

"I imagine I arrived there a little after 1 o'clock."

"You were with no one, Herr Tatzohn?"

"No, I went alone. If it's important I can prove it. I met one of the men from the office at Leopolds-weinkeller."

"His name, if you please?"

"Spalger. Herr Spalger." I hoped Spalger could remember he had met me.

Kresch swallowed several times and the big Schutzmann put down the quill toothpick, walked over to the door, tried it as if he were making sure the landlady or the boarders were not listening, nodded to Kresch and came back to the table. He left the toothpick on the table.

Bitter Thrusts At Dignitaries Causes Action

S.E. Cochran Cracks Down; Maxine Doyle Gets Lead; Amusement Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Following a close scrutiny of the play during rehearsal yesterday, Impresario Stephen E. Cochran has canceled Maxwell Anderson's explosive political drama of "Both Your Houses" from the list of vehicles to be presented by his National Theater Players.

"Both Your Houses" was scheduled for next week and, with the reputation of having won last year's Pulitzer prize award, was eagerly looked forward to by a considerable segment of the local theatergoing public who were of the opinion that Congress and the present Administration could "take it."

Mr. Cochran, however, was of a different view. After listening to rehearsal yesterday and checking the vitriolic lines hurled at high officials of the Federal Establishment and bandied about among opposing factions in the political alignment of the country in this year of our Lord, he reached a speedy decision, out of deference to the administration now functioning, to cancel the play from his season's repertoire. It is reported that a majority of the personnel of the acting company were in hearty consonance with his view.

Gay Farce Instead.

Thus it comes about that next Monday night, the National Theater Players will be seen not in "Both Your Houses," but in a frolicsome farce by Myron C. Fagan, author of "Peter Flies High" and other light dramatic works, not to mention motion pictures which he has executed on the Fox lot and elsewhere. The fairly expository title of Mr. Fagan's little comedy is "Jimmie's Women."

Lest it be thought that "Jimmie's Women" is an inconsequential achievement, without honor in its own country—which would be Broadway, of course—it may be well to offer the reminder that "Jimmie's Women" was the medium by which Minna Gombell was elevated to a stellar position, with her name spelled out in lights and everything, when she was Mrs. Fagan and her husband's gay charade was piling up a long Manhattan run.

I do not recall that the comedy has ever been played in Washington. Neither am I able to discover that it has ever been done in pictures. It seems, therefore, to come to the local boards as much of a pristine novelty as "Both Your Houses" would have been had not its political antipathies been quite so violent.

"Jimmie's Women," one is led to believe, is something after the "Twin Beds" motif—vivacious, fast-moving and just a little risque.

Other Booking Changes.

A surreptitious peek at what were Mr. Cochran's plans constrains the column to believe that "Jimmie's Women" originally was penciled in for the week of June 11. All that now, of course, is changed.

The week of June 11, under the present arrangement, will be devoted to "The Shining Hour," the New York success in which Gladys Cooper, Adrianne Allan and Raymond Massey have just completed a New York run and prepare now to present in London late in the summer.

For the week of June 4—that would be the week after "Jimmie's Women"—one of the high spots of the summer season is announced in "Sailor, Beware," the rowdy, naval comedy that has been packing them in at the Lyceum Theater in New York ever since 'way back yonder.

To condense it for you, the National will present the week of May 28, "Jimmie's Women;" June 4, "Sailor, Beware;" June 11, "The Shining Hour."

So now you know.

Pursuing the "long, cordial and interesting letter" from Maxine Doyle, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater, and now a rising young motion picture actress out in Hollywood, celebrated in this space yesterday, all the way across the continent came a telegram yesterday afternoon, couched in slightly more ecstatic terms—some of which I take the liberty of quoting, to wit:

"On accounta you've been so swell and had such faith in me, I want you to be the first to know that Warners are loaning me to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the lead in 'Student Tour.' Isn't that grand? Will write and tell you all about it. Maxine."

Not being up on "Student Tour" and it not being listed among current or future M-G-M releases on any release charts in my possession, I called the M-G-M offices in Washington and learned that "Student Tour" is a feature picture—not a short subject—scheduled for early production and that if the up-and-coming Miss Doyle has copped herself the lead in that one, she has really begun to go places and do things. That seems, as a matter of fact, to be the situation exactly, as it stands at present. A great many will wish to join in congratulations to Maxine, who has just enough Irish spunk in her makeup not to take "No" for an answer.

The Motion Picture Academy, which I suspect is not to be confused with the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, although it is said to have operated successfully in both New York and Hollywood and to have the indorsement of leaders of both the stage and screen, has opened a Washington branch at 1624 H street, where applicants for screen training are now being interviewed as part of a Nation-wide search for new screen and stage personalities.

The institution, which is similar in design and purpose to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, will, in due course, have branches in all the principal cities of the country, according to the optimistic expectations of its sponsors. The establishment of the Washington branch of the academy was brought about largely through the efforts of Harold A. Long, chairman of the dramatic committee of the Arts Club of Washington.

Organized by prominent members of both branches of the modern theater—stage and cinema—none of whom, however, is named in the brochure now before me—the Motion Picture Academy is without company or political affiliations and plans solely to discover new acting talent and bring it to fullest possible fruition.

Several training classes already have been formed under competent instructors, although not in Washington, as yet. In addition to coaching prospective actors and actresses, classes will be formed to pursue special courses in stage dancing, dramatic art, elocution, play-line reading, poise, diction and all of the other essentials of successful stage or screen work.

The Washington branch of the Academy is open for enrollments both days and evenings.

From Ward Morehouse comes a reprint of his "Broadway After Dark" column in the New York Sun in which he gives credit for the best work of the past season up and down Broadway. Mr. Morehouse's recapitulation is extremely interesting, summing up, as it does, the whole scope of the New York theatrical season. His credits are many and of especial interest to Washington will be the one in which he singles out Katharine Hepburn "for her magnificent playing in at least two scenes—probably more—in Jed Harris's production of 'The Lake.' Also, Colin Clive and Blanche Bates."

There is another award—if it can be called that—with which the Capital will be in sympathy. That is the bestowal of the "Meanest Gal of the Year" title which Mr. Morehouse makes upon Mary Morris, "for her portrayal of Victoria Van Bret, meanest woman of the year, in 'Double Door.'"

And the disturbing part of all that is that Miss Morris has gone and done the whole repellant business right over again for the screen!

Those Human Dynamos.

After having watched Lupe Velez burn up energy at the rate of a great deal too much per second, from both backstage and out front, it is no wonder that Jimmy Durante delivered himself of the flat declaration during his recent week of personal appearances at Loew's Fox, where Senorita Velez also is appearing currently, that he would rather work opposite her, on either the stage or screen, than any other feminine player he knows.

That is wholly understandable. They work exactly alike. Which is to say that both give everything they have during the time they are before an audience. With Jimmy it is a trifle more obvious an expenditure of nervous energy than it is with Lupe. That is, unless you happen to be standing there when she comes off. Then you realize the difference. She is burning up physical voltage at a tremendous rate and when she steps back of the tormentors into the darkness of the wings there is a correspondingly enormous let-down.

Durante is high-power all the time, on or off. During an hour's train ride over from Baltimore with him the day he regaled the entire enrollment of a fashionable finishing school, much to the consternation of the chaperone, we were rendered utterly limp just watching him use himself up.

But that is what has put both him and Senorita Velez "in the money." Both are human dynamos and either one would have a difficult time finding as satisfactory a foil as the other.

Wait until you see them in "Strictly Dynamite!"

Bargain Offer.

Audit Bares Va. Fisheries Fund Laxity

Irregularities Found in Books of Suspended Inspectors.

Revision of System Is Urged in Report by Downs.

Richmond, Va., May 23 (Spl.).—Records of most of the State's oyster inspectors were kept negligently, and in two instances had been changed in such a manner as to permit the inspectors to remit to the Commonwealth amounts less than collected, L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor of public accounts, declares in an audit of the State commission of fisheries released by Gov. Peery today. Two inspectors were suspended April 7.

Mr. Downs reports that many inspectors had lost their receipt books.

Receipt books had been given by one inspector to another without notification to the commissioner.

Receipt books had been split by inspectors without authority.

Sets of tickets had been torn out of receipt books and were not available.

Receipts were not issued in proper numerical order.

Other Findings.

Receipt books were left with a shucking house and an individual to make out receipts for licenses of certain type.

Licenses had been issued and collections not made from 30 days to several months later.

Several inspectors had failed to use the official receipt forms specified by the commissioner, but instead had used scraps of paper and other blank forms in receipting for collections.

The State auditor recommends that the commissioner ascertain the mental as well as the physical fitness of each inspector for his particular position, and the commissioner will give full instructions to the inspectors for the proper performance of their duties.

Two Inspectors Suspended.

The report declares that receipt records of C. H. Muse, inspector, apparently had been changed "and that such changes would not likely have been unintentional," and that Muse had admitted that he had withheld collections until he had received his pay check for the month, "as he had used his collections for personal needs."

Muse was suspended by the commission on April 7. The audit disclosed, says Mr. Downs, that he owes the State $714.58.

In the case of W. H. Gary, inspector, several receipt books were missing, the report states, and changes had ben made in the duplicate copies. The report further declares that he did not know the true status of his accounts, but admitted owing the State about $800. The audit disclosed an indebtedness of $881.53. The inspector also was suspended on April 7.

Fredericksburg Park Robbery Bared by Shoe Employee.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 23 (Spl.).—That robbery was the motive of the brutal attack Sunday night on Milton J. Brown and Miss Fannie Kurz is the belief of investigatars, following the revelation that a young couple was held up and robbed last Wednesday night near the spot where the assault occurred in the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park by a colored man armed with a lead pipe.

Coincident in many details with the brutal attack from which Miss Kurz and Brown are still unconscious in the Mary Washington Hospital here, the clew is considered by investigators the most important since discovery of the mutilated pair Monday afternoon.

Gilbert Sullivan, a Virginia Shoe Co. employe and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Sullivan, of Upper Princess Anne, told the authorities today that Wednesday night he and a girl were parked in an automobile at exactly the same spot on the Battlefield Park road where Brown's car was discovered Monday.

Produces Lead Pipe.

Shortly after 8 p. m. and only a few moments after they had stopped, a colored man, apparently unarmed, walked down the road approaching the car. As he came close to the car window he suddenly drew a 2-foot length of lead pipe from his right sleeve and ordered the couple to walk about 150 yards down the road, Sullivan reports.

With Sullivan's companion in tears, the man commanded him to turn over his money. He had only $3. "Now, you walk back to your car, and if either of you say a word about this I'll kill you," the man is reported to have said.

Young Sullivan, too frightened to report his experience to the police, told about it to friends. When word reached the Police Department they contacted Sullivan, who revealed the whole story.

Henry Prasse was held up near the same spot Sunday night prior to the Brown-Kurz attack. Prasse, who had reported the colored robber armed with a sawed-off shotgun, today stated it could have been a piece of pipe.

In Critical Condition.

Brown and Miss Hurz were in a critical condition this afternoon, with Miss Kurz on the point of death. Physicians were surprised that she survived last night.

Sullivan's revelation disturbed the belief held yesterday by police that the assault was a crime of passion, substantiated by discovery near the spot of a blue earring, which evidence has failed to connect with Miss Kurz.

Last night, momentarily conscious, Brown is said to have hysterically implied that a woman beat him. A lover's quarrel several weeks before the attack adds to this phase of the mystery, according to police. Once, in his delirium, Brown shrieked "Where is Hilda" and is said to have mentioned the names of other girls.

Blood and flesh clotted under the fingernails of the young woman would have enabled chemists to determine whether the assailant was white or colored, but nurses cleaned the girl's fingers before a test could be taken.

Commonwealth Attorney W. B. F. Cole has hired special men on the case. Local interests in the affair is high, and public and private parties have offered rewards totaling $500 for apprehension and conviction of the criminal.

The chief hope of investigating authorities is the gradually dwindling possibility that one of the victims will gain sufficient consciousness and reason to recount the details of the crime.

Horse's Swift Race To Shelter Proves Fatal to Its Rider

Big Laurel, Va., May 23 (Spl.).—Bob Blevins, 42, and a companion were riding along a mountain road a few miles west of here when they were overtaken by a thunderstorm.

"Let's spur up and shelter under that tree," he proposed.

The other man's horse could not keep pace with Blevins', who disappeared around the curve. When the companion reached the tree he found it shattered by lightning, with Blevins and his horse dead on the ground.

J. P. Wiley, D.C. Middy, Takes First Honors

Heads Naval Academy Class to Graduate on May 31.

Midshipman John Preston Wiley, of Washington, will take first honors of the class to be graduated from the Naval Academy on May 31, it was announced yesterday.

Wiley, a graduate of Central High School, maintained a high scholastic standing throughout the four-year course at the academy. At the annual examinations in June of last year he stood No. 2, John M. Wilson, Scottsboro, Ind., being first.

During the academic year now closing he outstripped Wilson and several other close competitors, Wilson finishing fourth. Second "honor" man is Neil E. Kingsley, Waverly, Iowa, and third, Frank A. Nusom, Rockport, Tex.

Will Voluntarily Resign.

Wiley is said to be among a group who will voluntarily resign the service immediately after graduation, having secured a position with a large oil company. Authorities said an unusually large number have signified intention of resigning, regardless of what the final action of Congress may be on the bill to provide commissions for all of the class.

The final merit roll of the class, which has a roll of 464, shows that 24 will graduate with "star" rating, that is, they received 85 per cent or better of the aggregate for the four-year course. It was announced that 25 have elected to accept commissions as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, as has been the custom for a number of years.

In addition to Wiley, there are 22 other Middies appointed from the District to receive diplomas. Virginia is represented by ten, and Maryland, 15. Gov. Ritchie Pledges His Aid to Labor

Washingtonians Elected in Closing Session at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., May 23 (Spl.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie addressed the closing session of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor today and declared he would back the labor movement, as he always had done.

The election of officers took place today, with Joseph P. McCurdy, of Baltimore, being unopposed for president. Vice presidents elected were Walter V. Hurley and John Locher, of Washington; F. N. Kershaw and G. Kingston Howard, of Baltimore; John L. Geist, of Hagerstown, and John F. Burgess, of Cumberland. Other officers who were unopposed were Secretary Frank J. Coleman, of Washington, and Treasurer J. E. Toone, of Washington.

The Governor reviewed the relief work done in Maryland, which included a $12,000,000 bond issue for Baltimore relief. He said the State budget had been reduced $3,000,000.

Discussing Maryland's liquor laws, he said those adopted were more or less of an experiment and can be changed if found necessary.

Rabbi Also Speaks.

Rabbi Isreal, of Baltimore, said America is facing a crisis and urged union labor to do its bit, warning that if they did not radicals would. He scored corporations that paid huge salaries to officials while their workers were without jobs.

A resolution protested the present restrictions upon parking on the streets of Washington, except where those restrictions may be absolutely necessary. The resolution stated there are only about 50 per cent enough garages in Washington to house the automobiles registered there.

A resolution also urges that certain Government employes be permitted leave with pay in event of illness.

The "kick-back" racket in the building firms in Washington also was condemned.

Convict Labor Assailed.

The efforts of elevator construction union of Washington "to correct evils in their class" also was commended.

Other resolutions adopted today urged purchase of rubber from fair employers and exhorted purchasing agents of State, county and city to patronize Maryland Manufacturers.

Other resolutions condemn the police and State welfare board, in charge of the State penal farm at Roxbury, in using prisoners in the erection of the buildings in competition with building trades, and praised the work in Congress in the interests of labor of Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana.

Children (G. O. P. Preferred) Are Newest Maryland Issue

Three Candidates Say Rollicking Kiddies Will Have Use of Executive Mansion Grounds at Annapolis, "If Elected."

Baltimore, May 23 (Spl.).—Children have become an issue in the Maryland gubernatorial campaign of three Republican candidates.

Each is promising the voters that children will frolic in the Executive Mansion at Annapolis if he is elected—which would be a change indeed after these 15 years of Gov. Ritchie's bachelor tenancy.

They may be children of Harry T. Phoebus or of H. Webster Smith, whichever one wins the G. O. P. nomination and then the general election. Or they may be Republican children from the State, invited by the third Republican candidate, Harry C. Nice—provided that Mr. Nice is elected.

Phoebus Issues Invitation.

It came about like this: Last week Mr. Phoebus, who lives down on the lower Eastern Shore, at Princess Anne, spoke at College Park as follows:

"I am a married man and have four children—two girls and two boys—and believe the people of Maryland will feel that it will be delightful for those kids to live and play at the Governor's Mansion in Annapolis for four years, and the people, rich and poor, may visit the Governor's Mansion and be assured a cordial greeting by a cultured wife and four rollicking children."

That was good campaign talk and Mr. Smith was not long in replying. Said he:

"Of course, I've entered my three children, two girls and a boy. Like Mr. Phoebus, I believe, or hope, that the people of Maryland will find it delightful for my children to be playing at the Executive Mansion——"

Here Mr. Smith halted and added in an undertone: "They'll frolic, all right, those children of mine, if they ever get there."

"Seriously, though," he resumed aloud, "I do hope that the children who frolic in the executive mansion, if children do frolic there in the next four years, will be Republican children. Mr. Phoebus', Mr. Nice's, or the children of some Republican. I've sort of set my heart on the children being Republican."

Mr. Nice in Line.

Mr. Nice, catching the trend of things, had this to say today anent the frolicking children:

"Unfortunately, I have no frolicking children. My kiddies consist of but one son, and he is of age, and, sad to relate, his frolicking propensities have long since been abandoned.

"I find my home quite comfortable, my home life delightfully congenial, and I do not apprehend that my transportation next January to 'green fields and pastures new' is going to make any improvement in my domestic tranquillity and happiness.

"After my inauguration I shall be glad at any time to entertain all children, including those of my courteous opponents, on the grounds of the executive mansion, where all the people of Maryland will be welcome. I am passionately fond of children."

Mayor Walter Quenstedt of Annapolis, the other Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, is yet to be heard from.

Virginia ABC Head Is Silent On Publication

Intent to Claim Journal Connected With Board Denied by Manager.

Richmond, May 23 (Spl.).—Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, today said that he has no further statement to make regarding the Virginia Licensee, new monthly publication which aroused a protest from the board by allegedly giving the impression that it had an official or "inside" connection with the A. B. C. Department.

Ralph L. Dombrower, advertising counselor for the paper, said today that the Virginia Licensee Inc., had no intention of claiming any official connection with the board, and will be glad to make corrections of any statements considered misleading by the board or anyone else.

Publication of the paper will be continued, he said, and the June issue will appear on schedule.

A. Judson Evans, jr., local newspaper man, meanwhile, has resigned as editor of the publication, and the Virginia, Licensee, Incorporated, has not decided who will be the new editor.

A. B. Clarke, secretary of the ABC Board, in charge of public relations, said today that his name was used on the advertising rate card as "contributing editor" of the new publication without his knowledge or consent.

Bootlegging has been particularly brisk in cities other than Richmond during the past week with the illicit operators dumping their stocks at sacrifice prices. The price of aged moonshine has gone down as low as 50 cents per pint, and 5 cents per drink.

No change in prices is contemplated by the Virginia board for the near future, despite a price war in Washington and other cities to the northward, it was stated.

Speed, Safety Gains Studied By Aviators

Lindbergh and Doolittle View Langley Field's Research Results.

Langley Field, Va., May 23 (AP).—The men who fly and the men who make flying safer and faster today went through the mill of aviation progress in the giant research and experiment plant of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Leading 250 or more aviators and aviation authorities at the ninth annual Aircraft Engineering Research Conference were Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, ace of American airmen, and Maj. James H. Doolittle, transcontinental speed flier; Dr. Joseph S. Ames, president of Johns Hopkins University and chairman of the N. A. C. A.

Speed will be increased in American airplanes as a result of research and experiments in retractible gear, discussed at the conference and demonstrated in the laboratories.

Greater Safety, Comfort.

Safety and comfort will be increased as a result of the theory of Dr. Theodore Theodoreson, naturalized Scandinavian scientist of the N. A. C. A., who donated most of the past year to work on flutter and vibration, which, in nontechnical language, means the airplane's parallel to front-wheel shake in an automobile.

It is a mathematical solution to the measuring of airplane stretches, N. A. C. A. authorities said. Flutter and vibration discoveries in the past year were outstanding in the work of the organization.

The work of the committee was discussed and demonstrated not only on retractible gear and flutter, but also on compression-ignition engine combustion, seaplanes and cowling and cooling of aircooled engines. The conference also devoted a discussion to autogyros, which were found not necessarily slow craft.

Get Thrilling Ride.

The delegates were given a thrill in a ride down a 2,000 foot tank.

The tank work for the year dealt largely with experiments on shapes and sizes of pontoons, authorities striving for greater "seakindliness," as well as less friction, better take-off and easier landing.

The guests rode down the tank on a float carrier capable of a speed of about 60 miles per hour.

The committee came nearer to the perfection of deflectors in its experiments with engine cooling and, in experiments for the Navy, used its developments to increase power 46 per cent while heat was increased only 25 per cent. In the discussions, motion pictures were shown taken with a high speed camera.

Walt Mason, Himself

Home Again.

It was a most affecting scene when Insull, having crossed the brine, approached his native village green, surveyed his fig tree and his vine. We all were gathered at the beach to welcome Sam with proper vim, to tell him that he was a peach, and sing again the old-time hymn: "Home again, home again,
From a foreign shore,
To greet our friend once more."

All sorts of folks were gathered there, were gathered by the harbor road, the old and weak, the young and fair, to tell old Sam how much he owed. There were grim farmers in the lot, old men who'd wrestled with the soil, in weather cold and weather hot, to gain a modest little wad. They labored through the weary years, to gather up a fortune small, and now they murmured, wiping tears, that old Sam Insull got it all. And there were teachers who had taught the village kids to read and write, and with much diligence they wrought to make the children's future bright. They saved some nickels here and there, to buy potatoes in the fall, and drive the lean wolf to its lair—and old Sam Insull got them all. Poor women who, amid the suds, had labored for a scanty wage, and washed a thousand tons of duds, to guard against a lean old age, they saved a quarter or a dime, and hid the money in the hall, but old Sam then was in his prime, and he reached out and got it all.

Kuhel's Homer, One On, Prevents Nat Shut-Out as Browns Win, 6-2

4th Straight Dropped by Yankees

Chisox Make 18 Hits to Romp to 14-2 Triumph.

Dykes, Lyons, Simmons Slam Homers; Ruffing Is Pounded.

CHICAGO, May 23 (AP).—The league-leading New York Yankees suffered their fourth straight defeat and their sixth in seven Western games as the Chicago White Sox cut loose with an 18-hit attack for a 14-to-2 victory in the first of a three-game series today.

The White Sox collected 13 hits, including home runs by Manager Jimmy Dykes, Ted Lyons and Al Simmons, off Charlie Ruffing before the big right-hander retired in the eighth in favor of Jimmie Deshong. They continued to pound Deshong and before the last man was retired in the eighth sent seven runs across the plate.

The defeat was Ruffing's first after five victories, although it was the third time in his last four starts that he failed to finish. He was free with passes, walking six, but staved off disaster in the early innings with his strike-out ball. He fanned eight.

Lyons Goes the Route.

Lyons went the route for the Sox, holding the Yankees to six hits, including a homer by Tony Lazzeri. The triumph was the Sox's fifth in seven games with Eastern clubs and their seventh in 13 games since Dykes assumed the managership.

After Dykes had put the Sox in front with his homer in the second, the Yanks tied the count in the third when Earl Combs tripled and scored on Babe Ruth's single. The Sox started to pull away in the fifth, however, collecting two runs in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings.

When Simmons and Appling opened the eighth with consecutive singles, Deshong replaced Ruffing. But doubles by Dykes, Madjeski and Lyons, a single by Swanson and passes to Haas and Simmons, followed by Appling's second hit of the inning, quickly gave the Sox seven runs.

Wilson's Homer Gives Dodgers 5-3 Victory

Brooklyn, May 23 (AP).—Hack Wilson's home run with Linus Frey on base provided the Brooklyn Dodgers with the margin of victory in a 5-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

The Dodgers collected 13 hits off Jim Mooney and received valuable aid from the Cards in the way of errors. The Redbirds made three mistakes, each of which figured in Brooklyn's scoring. Frey, Brooklyn shortstop, was credited with making 11 assists, within three of the major and National League record.

Bush Handed First Defeat By Giants

Cubs Bow, 5 to 2, Before Pitching of Schumacher; Ott Slams Homer.

NEW YORK, May 23 (Spl.).—Timely hitting behind the effective pitching of Hal Schumacher gave the New York Giants a 5-to-2 decision over the Chicago Cubs and Guy Bush today.

The defeat was Bush's first of the season after winning seven straight games. He allowed only eight blows as compared to 10 off Schumacher, but the world champions bunched their blows.

Mel Ott gave the Giants the jump with his ninth home run with Manager Bill Terry on base in the first round and they never were headed. The Cubs scored both of their runs in the sixth on English's double and singles by Galan and Stainback.

Annapolis, Md., May 23 (Spl.).—Playing their final game before the supreme test with the West Point Cadets here Saturday, the Navy baseball team took the measure of Mount St. Mary's College, of Emmitsburg, Md., today, 6 to 3. The game was snappily played throughout, notwithstanding miscues by both teams.

The Mounts held a 2-to-1 advantage until the fifth, when the Middies put on a rally that resulted in four runs. Navy used Davis, second string hurler, Sexton and McGowan being held in reserve for the Army's battle.

Guilford and Dunlap Win Overseas

Westland and Fischer Defeated by Walker Cup Members.

By Gayle Talbot.

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 23 (AP).—America lost two more stout contenders for the British amateur golf title today. Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati and Jack Westland of Chicago bowed to members of the Union Jack's Walker Cup team in hard-fought third round matchers, but America still remains in a strategic position to capture the crown won only twice before by American homebreds.

Uncle Sam has mashie-wielding nephews in each of the four brackets. Jesse Guilford, the big Bostonian who is proving the sensation of the championship, remained in the top quarter and for the fourth round tomorrow faces the stiffest opposition in 23-year-old Jack McLean, the pride of Prestwick, who elbowed out Fischer in a sensational, par-cracking encounter, 2 and 1.

Dunlap Faces Task.

George Terry Dunlap, jr., American amateur champion, the other foreign survivor in the upper half, has a tough assignment to handle in the veteran Roger Wethered, British champion in 1923, whose game fairly bristled today as he cut down Westland, 3 and 2. If Dunlap succeeds in hurdling Wethered the slender American appears to have clear sailing ahead until Friday's semi-finals.

The young U. S. Open titleholder, Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, and the husky, stern-faced Californian, W. Lawson Little, were locked in the thick of the skirmish in the lower bracket. Goodman has no apparent obstacle between him and a semifinal joust with Little, who is matched against Lionel Munn, the Irish golfer, in the fourth round. Munn quit this year's British Walker Cup team after a controversy. Goodman's next opponent was to be one H. G. McCallum.

All in all, in view of the fortunate line-up of her players, America appears virtually certain to have at least two representatives in the semifinals Friday afternoon. Two rounds each will be played tomorrow and Friday.

Goodman Wins Twice.

Goodman, the betting-odds choice, caught up with the field by winning twice. In the second round, he eliminated Capt. G. A. Rusk, of St. Andrews, 5 and 4, while he downed Sean Burke, the Irish champion, 4 and 3, in the next round.

Little, likewise, had a busy day, defeating Lester Rankin, of Sunningdale, 5 and 3, and then registering a 3 and 2 victory over Eric McRuvie, England's second ranking amateur.

Guilford, who won the American title 13 years ago, and Dunlap won their third round encounters with plenty to spare. Guilford overhauled Lieut. Col. T. J. Mitchell, of Prestwick, by 6 and 4 and by the same count Dunlap eliminated George D. Hanay, former French titleholder.

6th for Frankhouse As Braves Down Bucs

Boston, May 23 (AP).—Fred Frankhouse, the Braves' ace right-hander, held the Pittsburgh Pirates to five hits today as the tribesmen took the series' opener, 6-1. Marty McManus and Bill Urbanski each got homers and their bats drove in all of the Boston runs.

In gaining his sixth win of the season, Frankhouse had the unusual experience of neither issuing a pass nor fanning a single Pirate. He forced the Pirates to ground out 17 times and drive 10 flies to his outfielders.

Houghton, 3 Up At 27th, Bows In Finals

BALTIMORE, May 23 (Spl.).—Charlie Betscnler, Rodgers Forge pro, returning to competitive golf after a year's absence, defeated Al Houghton, of Kenwood, outstanding District pro, 1 up, today in the 36-hole finals of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship.

Favorite, following his victories yesterday over Glenn Spencer and Ralph Beach, Houghton faltered on the last three holes after holding a 3-up lead on his Baltimore rival at the twenty-seventh.

The Baltimorean chopped down Houghton's lead with birdies on the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth. Two bad breaks, however, proved costly to the Kenwood pro. On the former hole Betschler evened the match with a birdie 3. Houghton's drive on the thirty-fifth found a divot hole. He started to use a potter, and then decided on a No. 3. Houghton missed the cup and Betschler captured the hole with a birdie deuce to the invading pro's par 3.

Houghton blasted his chances to even the match on the home hole when his tee shot was ditched, and he took a penalty stroke, winding up with a 5½ with Betschler.

Three years ago Betschler met Houghton in the professional sectional championship and registered three bordies and an eagle in a row, to win on the nineteenth. Today it took three birdies on the last nine to turn the trick.

Houghton shot a 72 in the morning and a 76 in the afternoon. Beaschler had a 72-79. Betschler was Maryland Open champion for four years.

Illinois Derby Annexed by Mata Hari

Even Money Favorite Leads New Deal and Plight to Wire.

AURORA, Ill., May 23 (AP).—Fillies do win derbies after all. —Mata Hari, queen of the American turf, owned by Charles T. Fisher, of Detroit, raced to an impressive victory in the $10,000 added Illinois Derby today, defeating New Deal by a length.

Plight, winner of the Texas Derby, was third. Patchpocket was fourth in the field of 12.

The queenly daughter of Peter Hastings-War Woman, a granddaughter of Man O'War, established a new track record for the mile and an eighth, running the distance in 1:49 4-5 to clip a full three seconds off the mark established by a couple of lowly selling platers 10 years ago.

Filly Even-Money Choice.

Mata Hari went to the post an even money favorite, paying $4.04 to win, $4.40 to place and $2.82 to show. The place price on New Deal was $9.30, with $4.61 to show, while Plight paid $2.84 to show.

The race was worth $8,230 to Fisher. It was the first major stake of the Illinois racing season, and the feature of the closing day of the 20-day meeting at Aurora. Tomorrow the thoroughbreds open a 27-day meeting at Washington Park, with the $25,000 American Derby June 2 as the principal stake.

The price was witnessed by 16,000.

Indians Defeated By Red Sox Rally

Cleveland, Ohio, May 23 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox stepped into the middle of an incipient Cleveland winning streak today and defeated the Indians, 7 to 5. Boston scored three runs in the ninth inning to do it.

The Indians were leading, 5 to 4, when the final inning started, having battered Lefty Grove for ten hits. Singles by Bishop, Grove and Morgan and

Go Quick, at 2 to 1, Wins in Belmont Juvenile Feature Race by Five Lengths

Filly Ridden To Victory By Hunter

Barn Swallow Scores at 7-1 Under Meade's Good Riding.

BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, May 23 (AP).—Go Quick, bay daughter of Haste-Parasol, owned and bred by George D. Widener, flashed home an easy winner in the thirty-seventh running of the bouquet, 4½-furlong fixture for 2-year-old platers here this afternoon. Favorite at 2 to 1, the consistent Miss rang up her second straight triumph by five lengths, collecting $3,160 as her share of the purse; S. W. Labrot's Maryland juvenile, King's Pleasure, beat J. J. Robinson's Jessie D. M. by a length and a half for the place.

Barn Swallow Winner.

E. R. Bradley's Barn Swallow, making her Eastern debut, ran the fastest mile of the meeting in winning the Ben Brush, an overnight handicap. With Don ("Long Shot") Meade in the saddle, the 4-year-old daughter of Black Servant won by four lengths in 1:36 1-5 to pay 7 to 1. War Glory was second, a half length before Golden Way.

Barn Swallow closely attended War Glory's paces to the stretch, where she went to the front and galloped clear as if much the best. Sun Archer, which ran so well in the metropolitan, was favorite. He lacked speed at all times, running a very dull race.

Belmont Park, May 23.

Dear Al:

Success from a Bennings angle was confined to a pair of short-priced winners today. They were Sickle Pair and Go Quick. However, we were well represented in the money on down the line and with only three more days here in New York, I imagine we will survive. Pardon me for hopping on Jockey Wall's neck, but I haven't been able to get that ride he gave Dark Winter yesterday out of my mind. You should have seen the same fellow today. He had the mount on Prince Comixa, a 12-to-1 shot (make note of that price). The same sleepy Walls who had to be dragged away from the barrier on the favorite, Dark Winter, was as alert as a rabbit on Prince Comixa, the 12-to-1 shot. He rode a do-or-die race from start to finish and won. But then today was another day. BILL.

First race—I'm offering a season pass to the morning workouts at Charles Town to anyone who can pick this race one, two, three And any selector who names three horses is guess Here's mine—Kindred Spirit, Tudor Queen, Gay Blade.

Second race—Escape looks like the logical pick in this jumping race and has all the earmarks of a favorite. Naylor might improve enough to take the second money. Blackcock to take care of the others.

Third race—Quel Jeu is assigned top weight in this sprint, but appears capable of handling the assignment. Dreel may pack the surprise punch of the field and is assured good odds. Watch Her to fill the show position.

Fourth race—Postscript and Carry Over appear to be a close fit in this race. I like them in the order named. Postscript gets a nice shift in the weights. Red Jug to lead the others to the wire.

Fifth race—Preadventure, with Silvo Coucci to do the riding, seems to have a wide margin on those fillies picked to sprint here. Has both workouts and races to recommend her. Black Rose and Golden Dream for the other awards.

Sixth race—Ballos drops down a few pegs to get in this mile race and I'm stringing along. Pomponius and Uncle Donald to do the chief chasing.

SICKLE PEAR broke alertly, was sent to the lead, and rated along saved ground, but had to be hard ridden all through stretch to win. WATERWITCH, going in best form, closed gamely and held on well. CYCLE, kept out in the middle of the track, closed gamely and is worth noting. IMMORTAL II ran a much better race and is rounding into racing condition and should win when properly placed.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000. The Shady Lane Steeplechase. For maiden 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:59½. Off at 3:00. Winner, J. GO QUICK is evidently a good filly. She got away fast, was sent to the front, and hustled along all the way won drawing away at end. KING'S PLEASURE was rushed into contention quickly and held on well. JESSIE D. M., showing smart improvement over recent effort, was a stout contender all the way. NO SAINT was hard ridden and had no excuse. TUTTICURIO tired chasing the pace. LITTLE LIE had speed for first three furlongs. DESERTER closed a big gap.

WAR GLORY, rushed into lead, set fast pace, saved ground, and held on well. GOLDEN WAY was kept up and closed very fast in stretch. WATCH HIM, always tired, had no mishap. SUN ARCHER ran a very poor race, being outrun from the start. His race was in direct contrast to previous good race. JOVIUS had no excuse. LARRANAGA was well up for five furlongs and then quit.

Kuhel's Home Run Saves Nat Shutout

Three Hits Net no Runs.

Well, the Nats finally succeeded in failing to score despite three straight hits in the sixth. Harris singled and then Stone singled, but when Harris attempted, for no good reason, to go to third on a temporary muff of Ston's ball by Sammy West, he was tagged out and the run that would have scored on Travis' single that followed obviously did not score. There was still only oen out, but Phillips and Pinch Hitter Dugas gave Newsom no trouble.

As I pointed out, the Nats' two runs in the seventh were the outgrowth of Kuhel's home run smash after Buddy Myer had opened with a double, but the Browns retaliated with a run off McColl in their half of the inning. Nothing else of importance occurred thereafter.

Al Brown Is Suspended By French Ring Group

Paris, May 23 (U.P.).—The French Boxing Federation today suspended Al Brown of Panama, world's bantam champion, until September 1 as a result of disqualification for holding after three warnings in a bout with the French fighter, Humery, last week. A fine of 5,000 francs also was assessed.

Washington-Lee High Wins as 27 Strike Out

Washington - Owned Ace Takes Hagerstown Feature Race.

HAGERSTOWN, May 23 (Spl.). Many Washingtonians, who were among the 5,000 at the Hagerstown races today and bet on a Washington horse, Tody West, were nicely rewarded when the G. F. Cook sprinter made every post a winning one in the fifth race, to win by 15 lengths and pay $15.80 for a $2 ticket.

The favorite, Gallic, found it difficult to carry the 118 top weight and finished third. Rhodius, which won yesterday, to pay the best price of the day, came back to finish second to Tody West and reward his backers with a $25.40 mutuel second.

Polydee jumped on top in the opener and won by eight lengths, with Hardware second and Vitella third.

Rustic Cuba won the second by five lengths with Cloudy Day second and Black Dreams third.

Modern Times Scores.

Modern Times, kept close to the pace in the third, was sent to the front in the back lane to win from Nisia and Baby Chink.

In High, which paid the shortest mutuel since racing was introduced here, just got up to win from a long shot, Round Bend, which finished a length back after leading most of the way. Donna Dulcin was third. The owner, Bernard Bond, lost the winner when W. Ellis Johnson, Devon, Pa., dropped $900 in the box to claim him.

Benish Way, cofavorite with Worthington, jumped on top with the break and was never in danger. Worthington finished second and Steelton third.

Kingbird won the final. McDonald H. was second and Solace third.

The track was still slow today, but should be in good condition tomorrow.

U. S. Vs. Canada Davis Cup Net Play Today

WILMINGTON, Del., May 23 (AP).—Ace racquet wielders of the United States and Canada concluded preliminary formalities today with the draw for opponents and squared off for the opening of the American zone Davis Cup tennis eliminations.

They meet in four singles and one doubles engagements over tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at the Wilmington Country Club, with the winner of three of the five matches gaining the right to oppose Mexico to decide this continent's representative overseas in the classic international play.

The luck of the draw places the ranking player of each country—Frank Shields, New York ace, and Walter Martin, Toronto flash—as opponents in the second of tomorrow's two singles engagements. In the opening encounter at 1:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, the California giant, Lester Stoefen, meets Marcel Rainville, diminutive Montreal veteran.

With official pronouncement of Friday's doubles pairings not to be given out until 24 hours before the teams go on the court, the likelihood is George Lott and Johnny Van Ryn will uphold the United States' end against the strokes of Gilbert Nunns, Canadian captain, and his speedy teammate, Laird Watts.

Saturday, the singles opponents of Thursday are reversed, and Shields will take the court against Rainville, while Martin swings his racquet against Stoefen.

Stocks Shrink In Gloom of Uncertainties

Busines News and Control Fears Reduce Sales to 655,990 Shares.

New York, May 23 (AP).—Beset by unfavorable midweek trade news and the continued gloom in brokerage circles over the probable effects of Federal control of speculation, the stock market settled lower today in quiet trading.

Although trading quickened somewhat in an early selling flurry, the market soon reverted to a colorless drift. Volume on the stock exchange shrank to 655,990 shares, compared with 830,980 in the preceding session. The average of 90 stocks closed seven-tenths of a point lower at 75.9.

Silver and Inflation.

Silver ceased to gleam in the foreground as a dominant speculative influence. Further study of the Administration's silver program seemingly convinced markets that its inflationary possibilities were indefinite and distant.

Moderate strength in the dollar against foreign exchanges was attributed to the lack of inflationary implications seen in the silver proposals. High-grade bonds stuck to a steady course, while issues of lower rating eased in sympathy with tendencies in other markets.

Early pressure on stocks carried U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel, among outstanding shares, into new low ground for the year, but the list generally got fair support above recent low points.

Losses of Fractions.

Losses of fractions to about 2 points predominated at the finish among such issues as U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, Allied Chemical, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Anaconda Copper, Consolidated Gas, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

American Telephone ran into selling, suffering a net loss of 2⅜ points, on omission of the $2 quarterly dividend on common stock of its subsidiary, the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., following the recent unfavorable rate decision against the company.

Brooklyn-Manhattan-Transit was one of the few strong spots. It sold at a new 1934 top, helped by the announcement the company had sold $8,000,000 in long-term bonds to pay off bank loans. Silver shares steadied after their decline yesterday, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting and Cerro de Pasco closing only fractionally off.

Steel Share Sales.

Steel shares were sold on reports operations of the industry had entered a seasonal decline. Iron Age estimated steel operations were off 3 points, at 58 per cent of capacity. Further declines in steel scrap prices were taken as an indicator of the current trend in the industry.

The margin of gain in electric power production over 1933 was reduced to 11.2 per cent from 11.9 per cent the preceding week in the weekly figures of the Edison Electric Institute.

Traffic figures of individual railroads were encouraging, however, and potinted to a contra-seasonal gain in carloadings last week.

Brokers waited gloomily for the Federal exchange control bill to emerge from the Senate-House conference. While trading ebbed, sale of a stock exchange seat was recorded at $96,000, off $9,000 from the previous sale.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Arguments Advanced by President Roosevelt in Favor of Silver Are Unsupportable Either by Statistics or by Economic Logic.

By Ralph West Robey.

President Roosevelt's message on silver adds one more item to his long list of extraordinary statements on money and monetary policy within the last year. To say that it involves a thesis that is not accepted by any recognized monetary authority either in the United States or abroad, is merely to repeat a fact that the President has made commonplace. And to recall that if his ideas are carried out they will place a further burden upon our financial position, but will not be of aid to lasting recovery, is merely to indicate what must be clear to anyone capable of logical analysis in the field of money, credit and prices.

From a theoretical point of view, as contrasted with the actual legislation proposed, the burden of the whole message is contained in one short paragraph. In this three points are made: First, that we must broaden the metallic base of our monetary system; secondly, that we must stablize the "purchasing and debt paying power of our money on a more equitable level"; finally, that "we should not neglect the value of an increased use of silver in improving our monetary system. Each of these deserves the serious consideration of anyone who is willing to think of the problem from other than a politicial point of view.

Statistics Disprove the First Main Thesis.

The first—broadening the metallic base of our monetary system—lends itself well to statistical anayisis. In 1913 we had only $1,300,000,000 of gold in this country. Starting in 1915, we began to gain gold with the result that by the end of the war our holding amounted to approximately $2,500,000,000. During the early twenties there was a further heavy gain, carrying our total to some $4,000,000,000. It remained at approximately this level, although with large variations in both directions, until the devaluation of the dollar. This devaluation had the effect of increasing the dollar amount of the holding by some 70 per cent. The result is that today our gold supply amounts to $7,750,000,000.

Even the President refers to this in his message as "the abundant metallic reserves back of our paper currency." Actually it is 145 per cent of the volume of currency outstanding in the country. Is it not, therefore, a bit fantastic to talk about needing to increase the "metallic base?"

The second point made by the President—stabilizing our money at a more equitable value—reflects once again the teachings of the Warren-Fisher-Committee of the Nation school. This, in brief, is that our price level is determined by the amount of gold we have as measured by dollars. From a long-term point of view there is just enough accuracy in this statement to make it appeal to superficial analysts. On a short-term basis the thesis has no validity, and no one, including Prof. Warren, has yet been able to show that it does.

Arguments for Silver The Weakest of All.

On the desirability of using more silver the case for the President's point of view is even worse than on either of the above. Here, in fact, he has no argument. He says simply that the desirability of doing something in this direction "has been obvious" since 1929. In what manner it has been obvious, and to whom, are points that he does not discuss. And for good reason, for certainly it has not been obvious to the vast majority of the public, or to those who spend their lives studying monetary problems.

What we have, then, in this message of the President is a request that has to stand without theoretical justification. The claim that we need a larger metallic base, that through a larger metallic base we will get a higher price level, and, finally, that silver is the proper means for getting this larger metallic base, in a word, is a sheer rationalization of an untenable position.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was inactive today. Kafirs and iron and steel shares were the best sections of the market. Silver issues hardened, but gilt-edged securities eased on lack of public support. Industrials, Gurmet bonds and transatlantic issues weakened. The market closed dull.

Paris—Speculative selling caused slight recessions on the bourse, industrials turning heavy. The market, however, picked up slightly and exhibited strength toward the close, which was firm.

Berlin—After a dull session in which prices were weak, the boerse closed firmer on optimistic expectations regarding developments at the transfer conference.

LEAD—Steady; spot, New York, 4.00; East St. Louis, 3.85.

ZINC—Quiet; East St. Louis, spot and future, 4.35.

Bonds Decline Three-tenths; Trends Mixed

Secondary Loans Weaken as Sales Mount to $10,453,000.

New York, May 23 (AP).—Irregular tendencies continued to prevail in the bond market today, with secondary categories generally lower while prime investment groups maintained a fairly steady tone.

The trading volume was again restricted, although it was somewhat larger than that of the previous session. Transfers totaled $10,453,000, par value, against $9,588,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off three-tenths of a point at 85.8.

Traders Continue Hesitant.

Both traders and investors were a little hesitant in the face of further indications that steel production was slipping and that several other lines of business and industry apparently were reflecting seasonal influences to a greater or less degree.

In spite of forecasts that freight car loadings figures for the past week, which will be released Friday, may show a better than normal increase, many carrier liens showed recessions of a point or more.

Among these were some of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Chicago & Western Indiana, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, Southern & Western Pacific.

Utilities and Industrials.

Utilities and industrial issues, off fractionally to around a point, include those of Warner Bros., U. S. Rubber, International Telephone, International Hydro-Electric, Consolidated Gas and American Rolling Mill. American Writing Paper 6s added 2⅛ points to their recent losses. Bonds of American I. G. Chemical, Columbia Gas, National Dairy and Richfield Oil improved.

U. S. Government securities were moderately active, with gains ranging from 1-32 to 7-32 of a point. Home Loan Owners 3s made their initial appearance on the "big board" list, having been transferred from the produce exchange. They closed at a premium of half a point.

Foreign obligations were relatively dull. Improvement was recorded by loans of Argentina, Japan and Sao Paulo. German government 7s declined, while the 5½s were a little higher.

Curb's Prices Drift Lower On Light Sales

Sags Noted in All Groups as Trading Drops to 152,000 Shares.

New York, May 23 (AP).—A slightly lower drift prevailed in curb exchange dealings today and the majority of prices at the close showed fractional declines. A few specialties ranged wider.

Volume was again light and transfers which approximated 152,000 shares represented only a slight increase over yesterday's. Selling appeared shortly after the opening In several feeble attempts to rally the market met enough selling to discourage the bullishly inclined traders.

Pan American Airways and Dow Chemical were firm in a small turnover. Sherwin Williams dipped 2½ in equally light dealings. Aluminum Co. of America lost a little more than a point.

Standard Oil of Indiana and Lake Shore were steady, but small losses were shown by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Fisk Rubber, Humble Oil, New Jersey Zinc, Pioneer Gold, Hiram Walker and Swift & Co.

Wheat's Gains Trimmed by Profit-Taking

Prices Close 3/8 to 3/4 Up; Corn and Oats Join Advances.

Chicago, May 23 (AP).—In a sudden outburst of strength late today, wheat jumped 2¼ cents above the day's low point, but then profit-taking partly wiped out gains.

Winnipeg quotations led the advance in wheat, and increasingly adverse crop prospects were reported both from Canada and from Europe, as well as from sections of the United States not heretofore regarded as seriously affected by drought, Ohio and Indiana in particular.

One unofficial estimate figured the Kansas crop as probably 65,000,000 bushels compared with the Government's May 1 forecast of 99,000,000.

Wheat Closes Unsettled.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅜ to ¾ above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ to ½ up; oats, unchanged to ⅜ higher, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

Eastern houses were conspicuous buyers during the late upswing of prices. Ohio reports current at this stage said that unless rain came quickly some parts of the State would not yield half a crop of wheat. Similar advices were at hand from Indiana. Meanwhile, Winnipeg messages told of indications of a major menace not only from drought, but also from extraordinary infestation of grasshoppers.

Much notice was taken of late reports that the Balkans, France, Germany and Italy showed likelihood of 1934 wheat crops 300,000,000 bushels less than last year.

Rumania Crop Damage.

Rumania crop damage was authoritatively estimated at 50 per cent, and Bulgaria at 20 to 40 per cent. There were also Washington reports that Department of Agriculture specialists looked for strengthening of world wheat prices the coming year, with prospects that the four principal exporting countries would have a carry-over at least 100,000,000 bushels under that of last year.

Lack of a broad general speculative trade acted as a decided drag on wheat prices, however, during much of the day, together with heaviness of the stock market.

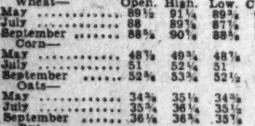
Steel Output Decreases to 58 Per Cent



New York, May 23 (AP).—Steel ingot output during the last week suffered its first important setback of the year, falling three points to 58 per cent of capacity, said Iron Age today. The review asserted that the "negative influences" that made their appearance in the industry a fortnight ago are multiplying.

Factors in the decline in output, as listed by the publication, were "formal submission of demands on the mills by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, further recession in motor car production, continuance of drought in the Central West, accumulating uncertainty as to the Administration policies and growing concern over the strike fever pervading labor in all branches of industry."

The review said that steel and iron producers will open their books for the third quarter on June 1, "but little contracting is looked for since few price changes are likely. Among the probable exceptions are cold finished steel bars which are slated for a $3 a ton advance, and sheet piling, which will be restored to the prices that recently failed to hold.

"Scrap, the most sensitive barometer of the steel trade has undergone further price declines in virtually all centers."

Continuation of the steel code is now regarded as a certainty, declared the review, adding that "while the changes that will be made as a result of conferences with NRA officials have not been announced, it is believed that they will be of a minor character."

Brazil Establishes Free Exchange Market

The Brazilian government has issued a decree permitting exchange derived from sources other than export bills to be sold freely, according to information received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Ralph H. Ackerman, Rio de Janeiro.

Exchange derived from export bills, however, it is pointed out, will continue to be used for government requirements and to pay for imports. The gray exchange market will also be continued.

Fight Pilots Argue Over Gloves

McLarnin, Ross to Have Special Mitts Made, Final Decision.

Battlers Declared Fit by Club Physician; Weigh In Monday.

NEW YORK, May 23 (AP).—The brain trusts of Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin came to visit pleasantly today with the New York State Athletic Commission, and stayed to quarrel most of the afternoon over the fit of gloves the two champions will wear in their 15-round duel for the welterweight title Monday night.

Not even interested bystanders, the two athletes sat around the commission rooms, read papers, chatted pleasantly, and yawned occasionally as their managers, enjoying rare moments in the spotlight, refused to accept one set of 5-ounce gloves after another, either because they were too tight, too loose, too this, that or the other.

"Plot" Fumes Foster.

"It's a plot to keep my Jimmy boy from working out this afternoon," fumed ancient "Pop" Foster, the Irishman's manager, as the debate went into the third hour and a groggy manufacturer of the leather mittens staggered in with fresh sets of gloves that weren't even the right weight.

"Fooey," chorused Art Winch and Sam Pian, managers of the Chicago lightweight champion, "he wasn't going to work anyway."

Ross nudged McLarnin.

"You'd think they were going to do the fighting Monday night," he grinned. "For my part I'd just as soon wear skin tight gloves, silk or none at all."

"That wouldn't make me mad," said the deadly punching McLarnin.

At the end the managers of the two fighters whose hands have always fitted perfectly into regulation gloves, decided to have special sets made.

Both Pronounced Fit.

Both boxers were pronounced fit by Dr. William Walker, though he said neither was in peak condition, proper enough since both have several more days of training. Their reactions were normal and neither showed signs of nervousness.

A supplementary contract was signed by the managers, agreeing to weigh in at noon next Monday, instead of the usual 2 p. m. This was part of a side agreement whereby McLarnin has posted a $10,000 forfeit that he will not weigh over 145 pounds, though the articles call for 147.

Herman Faces Galento at Portner's

Heavies to Clash Tonight; Von Reedon Is Off Hunt Club Card.

PORTNER'S ARENA, which will continue under the joint operation of Bill Moses and Abe Martin, is uncorking the only local fight this week with Tony Galento scheduled to make passes at Italian Jack Herman for 10 rounds tomorrow night. Boxing moves right into the Capital's back yard Monday at the Riding and Hunt Club with two 10-round cofeatures.

A spar-mate of Champion Primo Carnera, Italian Jack Herman, is a fitting opponent for the murderous-punching Jersey "killer." Even if he doesn't remain upright more than a round or two he will be doing as well as the best local talent has been able to do against Galento to date. Galento, it was who tagged Donald (Reds) Barry with a sleep-producer in less than a minute and Natie Brown, at present on top of the local heavy heap, fared little better, bowing out in the second round.

Seeking Substitute.

The Riding and Hunt Club situation was thrown into some confusion yesterday by the flat refusal of Charley von Reedon to go through with his scheduled 10-rounder with Lew Feldman. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is casting about for some suitable substitute and hopes to lure either Benny Bass or Frankie Covelli into the squared circle with the feather who ranks No. 2 in New York State. The other cofeature, a 10-rounder between Joie Costa and Charley Comer, will go on as scheduled.

The Portner's feature will be supported by three interesting sixes, which feature Mike Groves against Baby Charles, Bill Bullock with Dallas Palmer and Porky Saab opposed to Al Parks. All three of the supporting sixes loom as potential "naturals" and should bolster the top bout creditably.

The Riding and Hunt Club's top bouts will be backed by an 8-round semifinal between Pete Gullota and Ray Bowen, local welterweight pride. A 4-rounder between "Deacon" Owen and some suitable light-heavyweight opponent will open the festivities.

Parkersburg to Hold Harness Meet May 30

Parkersburg, W. Va., May 23 (Spl.).—Plans have been made for holding a public harness race meet May 30 on the private track of W. H. Bickel, well-known oil operator, in Lubuck district near here. Previously all plans for having harness racing this year in Parkersburg had been abandoned.

The meet is to be a holiday affair, with an old-fashioned picnic dinner as a feature. There will be trotting and pacing events with entrants from various cities of this section.

A counterfeiting business that worked so well that it could not be stopped, even though the men who ran it were safe in jail, was started in the late 90's by two Philadelphia apprentice engravers, known variously as Tappan and Benton, or Taylor and Bredell.

These counterfeiters, who were necessarily expert engravers, turned out a $100 bill which was so perfect that everybody called them genuine except one man, Special Agent W. H. Moran, who became head of the secret service. The Government found no way of stopping this flood of worthless $100 bills except to call in the whole issue—$24,000,000 worth—and destroy it.

Government agents finally ran across a slim lead which led to the arrest of Tappan and Benton. But, strange as it seems, even while they were in jail a batch of counterfeit $20 bills was put in circulation. Examination of the $20 bills showed without a doubt they were the work of Tappan and Benton, because an engraver always leaves certain identifying characteristics in his work.

When the new counterfeit bills were traced to their source, agents found to their amazement that Tappan and Benton had engraved the plate and were printing the money right in their cell in jail. Materials had been smuggled in to them.

With Hook and Line . . .

By Jean Monk.

FISHING this season in salt water is starting off on the right foot. Which is to say it isn't starting like we have been saying it would. That eternal elusiveness about fishing is one of the things which gives the sport its great kick.

Let's look at the record.

Last year, May 10, 30 fishing boats went out from Brooms Island and three of them returned with small catches. Up to May 15 last year no catches had been made at Solomons. May 16 last year another fleet of 30 boats fished out from Brooms and two catches of five croakers each were reported. May 16 last year one party went out from Herring Bay and caught nothing.

Fish Very Scarce.

May 22 last year three good catches were made at Benedict, out of a score of parties that went out. It was not until May 24 last year that any catches were reported at Cobb Island and Rock Point. On that date 24 fishing boats went out from these places and 21 boats returned without a fish.

From May 26 to June 11 last season my little blue book of records is severely silent as to catches. A few fish were being caught here and there, but reports were scarce, and that's what I have on record—reports.

From June 15 till the close of the season last summer my little book is filled with catches. This indicates that fish were not being caught in any great numbers last year until June 15. And this applies to Patuxent, the Potomac and the bay.

I am aware of the fact, of course, that certain fishing enthusiasts have been telling you and me for quite a while now that possibly tomorrow or the next day croakers can be caught at any point in the bay or on the rivers. Such reckless predictions are designed to get us all into trouble.

None at Brooms Yet.

In my first article this season, April 20, I stated that the large croakers would possibly start biting at Benedict and Brooms as early as May 10. They were about four days late. They have not been caught to date at Brooms, Benedict, Sandgates or in the Potomac in any great numbers. But more fish have been reported caught in the Potomac this season than in the Patuxent. And this is exceptional.

They are being caught from Piney Point to Rock Point. This is a splendid fishing section of the Potomac. There are a number of fishing captains on this part of the Potomac, but they seem to think that every fisherman in Washington knows them by their first names, has their telephone numbers and knows how to reach their wharves.

If something could be done to snap these fishing captains out of their Rip Van Winkle sleep, if they would tell the readers of this column where they are located, fishermen of Washington would soon beat a path to their doors. But they sleep on and on and other fishing centers get the business.

Opening Slowly.

Capt. J. L. Gouldsborough, Piney Point, caught 23 large croakers Sunday, May 6, but the next Sunday, May 13, he caught nothing. Capt. Sam Manifold, faring out of Herring Bay to Sharps Island, bagged 18 large croakers Saturday night, May 19. And Capt. R. E. Lee, Shady Side, told me not many days ago that 6 large croakers were caught near Shady Side Saturday night, May 19.

It was the eighteenth of May last year before any catches were made at Tilgham (Sharps) Island. Capt. Ed Garvin, on that date, landed 54 large croakers on three trips out.

If hard-boiled facts can be relied on, if figures can be trusted, I wish to state that the reason we have made few catches so far this season is because the fishing season had not opened.

It was not until May 22 last year that fishing got under way at Benedict and Brooms, and not until June 11 that any reportable catches were made out of Herring Bay, Shady Side and Galesville. And the first good catch to be made at Solomon last year was June 9.

And yet—last summer was the biggest fishing season in the history of hook and line fishing in our old bay and its tributaries. Let's be patient. The season is just now opening, slowly but surely opening, just as it does every year.

Fighter Flouts Authority of Ring Body

Von Reedon Refuses to Accept Doctor's Diagnosis on Hand Injury.

CHARLEY VON REEDON yesterday achieved the more or less dubious distinction of being the first boxer to flout the authority of Washington's brand-new boxing commission by flatly refusing to fulfill a contract to fight Lew Feldman in a 10-round cofeature at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday. Von Reedon claimed he was unable to go through with the bout because of an injured hand, but Dr. Robert E. Moran, an official referee for the commission, said after an examination that the injury was not one to prevent Von Reedon's fighting as scheduled.

"Von Reedon has a chronic bursitis on one knckle of his right hand," was Dr. Moran's opinion, "and his hand will be in that condition more or less continuously as long as he continues in the boxing game."

After the diagnosis, Von Reedon still refused to go through with the scheduled bout, stating that he had made up his mind the night before and had no desire to change it. Inasmuch as Von Reedon has not yet been issued a license to box, the commission is powerless to impose an official suspension, but it is generally believed that it will descipline the boxer if he applies for the necessary permit to box here by refusing to license him.

The commission issued a judge's license to C. R. (Buck) Grier and an announcer's license to Col. James J. Lake to round out it's business yesterday.

Horomter, Favorite Winner at Woodbine

Toronto, Ontario, May 23 (U.P.).—Horomter, R. S. McLaughlin's unbeaten son of Hourless, won his seventh consecutive race today by taking the measure of four 3-year-olds in the Breeders' Futurity at Woodbine. A heavy favorite, paying but $2.60 straight, he took the lead early and carried his 127-pound imsixteenth journey in 1:47 2-5. Speypost to the finish of the mile-and-a-gold was second and Candy Feast third.

Central Heads In Golf Title Entries

School Tourney for Post Cup Starts Tomorrow; Entries in Tonight.

ENTRIES for the first annual Metropolitan School Golf Championship for The Washington Post Trophy will close tonight, and the pairings and starting times will be made at a meeting of officials of the District Scholastic Golf Association, tournament sponsor, at the Washington Hotel, at 8 o'clock.

The tournament opens tomorrow at Indian Spring at 1 p. m. with an 18-hole qualifying round and will be followed by two rounds of match play on Saturday at Kenwood, and two more rounds on Sunday at Congressional.

Virtually all of the outstanding high and prep school golfers in Washington and vicinity are competing. Each school is entering its strongest four-man team in the special team event.

President Maury Nee, of the association, expects a starting field of 70 golfers. The 16 low scorers will qualify for match play. Entries should be sent to Nee at his home, 2855 Woodland drive northwest, to Director Frank Emmet, at Georgetown Prep, or to the association, at at Washington Hotel, tonight.

Central Enters 11.

The largest entry from any one school has come from Central, which has 11 contestants. Capt. Neil Turner, Buzzy Schrider, Howard Polinger and Billy Rochelle will comprise the team, while other entrants are Bob Murphy, Danny Garlem, Wilbur Turner, Billy Dowling, Phil Laswell, Joe Rogers and Sam Kurland. Tech has entered Bob Sheehan, Teddy King, Joe Keller, David Parkman and Bob Gottlieb as team alternate. Bethesda-Chevy Chase's team is composed of Capt. Harvey Johnson, Henry Atkinson, Joe Mason and Gerad Warthen. Roy Mattingly and Bob Shelton also are entered from the Montgomery County school. Playing for Roosevelt will be Capt. Andy Oliveri, Jimmy and Bob Brownell and Bob Morris.

The topheavy favorite, Georgetown Prep, is relying on Capt. Frank Allan, Maury Nee, Frank Carey and Jack Sewall. Georgetown Prep will enter additional golfers. Billy Detweiler, of the Garrett Parkers, District junior champion, who has been out of golf with a broken finger, may celebrate his return tomorrow.

Ten from St. John's.

St. John's is entering a ten-man team piloted by George Sullivan, while H. King Cornwell, young Columbia star, is heading a quartet from St. Alban's. Billy Shea, Buddy Bowie, Jack Higgins and Jack Loveless are certain entrants from Western. Buddy Sharkey, Dick Berberick, Norman Jarvis and Frank Ruzzert will compete for Gonzaga. Silver Spring High is pinning its hopes on Jack Keele, Bruce Robertson, Elmer Parsley and Sam Wolfe.

Fenlon Seeks Coach Berth In Virginia

Former G. W. Ace Wants Fredericksburg High School Post.

REDERICKSBURG, Va., May 23 (Spl.).—Johnnie Fenlon, 4-letter all-American mention quarterback of George Washington University, last night formally announced in a talk before the Fredericksburg Kiwanis Club, that he is a candidate for the vacant coaching berth at Fredericksburg High School.

A number of local high school athletic enthusiasts are sponsoring Fenlon's candidacy in order to begin a renaissance of Fredericksburg High School athletic fortunes.

Fenlon, at present assistant football coach at George Washington University, was recommended by James E. Pixlee, athletic director of George Washington, who also was a guest of the local Kiwanis Club.

The one-time general of Colonel football strategy was spoken of by Pixlee as one of the best forward-passers developed in this section of the country. Fenlon declared himself pleased with this section and its people.

Joseph E. McCalley, president of the city school board, and Kuzener Bauman, secretary of the board and exalted ruler of the Elks, were present to hear the George Washington athletic leaders. Mr. Bauman declared the Elks would carry on sand-lot baseball this summer in connection with Kiwanis Club summer work. The high school coach will train the boys for the sport.

Great Cacapons Cop.

Leetown, W. Va., May 23.—The Great Cacapon Eagles defeated the Leetown Lions here by a 6-4 score. The Eagles trailed until the ninth inning when they broke loose with a five-hit attack, which, coupled with an error and a walk, netted them five runs.

Ambrose was on the hill for the Eagles and was in good form but he was given poor support. J. Bradley pitched well until he weakened in the ninth. Ambrose also led the batting attack with three hits.

300 Patriotic Groups Will Mass Colors

Thousands Are Expected to View Seventh Annual Ceremony Sunday.

Tribute to the patriotism of the Nation and the veterans of her wars will be paid at Washington Cathedral's Amphitheater Sunday, when more than 300 units, representing veterans' and civic organizations, participate in the seventh annual Massing of Colors.

The impressive ceremonies on Mount St. Alban are scheduled to begin at 3:40 p. m., under the auspices of the Military Order of the World War and Canon Anson Phelps Stokes.

Color guards, representing the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, National Guard, High School Cadets and veteran, civic and patriotic groups, will parade before an audience which is expected to reach 13,000.

The memorial address will be delivered by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who himself is a major in the Chaplains' Reserve Corps.

Greetings From President.

Preceding his address a message of greeting from President Roosevelt will be read and a short talk delivered by Admiral William H. Standley, U. S. N., and Col. Alva J. Breasted, chief of chaplains, U. S. Army. Capt. Arlington A. McCallum, chaplain general of the Military Order of the World War, will lead the prayers. Canon Stokes is to be master of ceremonies.

Prior to the main events the United States Marine Band will give a patriotic concert, and immediately after the ceremonies taps will sound. Promptly at 3:45 p. m. the color guards of the various units will begin their march from the grove, in the southwestern section of the grounds approaching the head of the Pilgrim Steps with their colors in the form of a poppy cross.

Drum Corps to Participate.

The procession will be led by Maj. Walter W. Burns, of the District National Guard, and the 260th Coast Artillery Drum and Bugle Corps. The other drum corps which will participate include the Veterans of Foreign Wars Overseas Drum and Bugle Corps, the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, the Washington Boy Scouts Drum and Bugle Corps and the Advance Post Boys Drum Corps.

Four sections will compose the Parade of Colors, followed by the vested clergy and speakers. Leaders of the four divisions are to be Maj. Charles Demonet, Lieut. Col. Robert P. Parrot, Lieut. Jules Demont and Capt. Myron D. Smith.

Social Hygiene Society To Hear Dr. Gruenberg

Dr. Benjamin C. Gruenberg, lecturer, author and scientist, will be the principal speaker at the annual dinner and meeting of the District Social Hygiene Society at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow at 6:45 p. m.

"How Parents and Teachers Can Educate for Social Health" will be Dr. Gruenberg's topic. Dr. William A. White will preside at the dinner and meeting and comment on social hygiene trends. A brief summary of the year's work will be given by the executive secretary.

22 Pupils Will Dance In Recital Tomorrow

Mary Day will present 26 pupils in a dance recital tomorrow evening in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. A novelty on the program will be a ballet entitled "Hotel Tapette," done entirely in tap steps. Other numbers will be a Pastoral, a Dresden China Romance, an amusing Rag Doll Pas de Deux, and Dancing Poodles.
